Mail Flights Held Up on All Routes

Fess Again Denounces Cancellations; Carey Hits Service.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Taking what was believed to be his first step toward unification of all Government agencies dealing with land aviation, President Roosevelt yesterday asked and obtained Senate approval of a $10,000,000 appropriation to be spent in his discretion for the development of military aviation and the employment of civilian fliers.

Earlier it became known the President is dissatisfied with the present aviation policy of the Government, believes it impractical and a failure for 20 years and that he has inaugurated a survey to bring about a coordination of aviation activities.

These developments are the direct result of the deaths of ten Army fliers assigned to carry mail. As Army air mail planes remained grounded another day as safety precautions were made, the Senate, by a vote of 51 to 22, adopted the House bill providing funds to finance the Army in its new job.

No reason was given for the continued delay in the Army undertaking to resume air-mail flights on the nine routes announced Monday. But it was assumed that the Air Corps command, which has taken criticism of its activities much to heart, wishes to do everything humanly possible to avoid any more fatalities.

Disregards Groundlings.

How far the President's plans for reorganization of the Government's aviation agencies have progressed remain unknown, but it was intimated on Capitol Hill that he has made up his mind to disregard the years-old objections of groundminded Army staff officers against giving aviation a place of its own away from their jurisdiction.

Whether Mr. Roosevelt intends to create an interdepartmental bureau under the jurisdiction of a board of military fliers and civilians or un-

Greece Buys Insull Ticket

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Athens, March 14 (U.P.).—Samuel Insull's asylum in Greece appeared definitely at an end today when the government bought the elderly Chicago fugitive a ticket on the Orient Express, leaving tomorrow.

Insull, ill and weary of his long fight to escape return to the United States on charges of fraud, continued to battle against forced departure. He argued that he was too ill to move.

Testimony by doctors, including a heart specialist, however, failed to budge the foreign office authorities. They obtained the necessary Balkan state visa for Insull's United States special identity card—given him for three months in lieu of a regular passport—and handed him a ticket.

The express connects Paris and Constantinople (Istanbul), but has a branch line running northward to Berlin. Insull could reach Jugoslavia, Bulgaria or Albania on the express, but he could not proceed to Turkey because the Turks refuse to give him a visa.

His wife urged him to give up to the United States consular authorities here, for return to America, but other friends, including a Mrs. Coujoumdjoglou, a constant companion during his exile here, advised against such a course. This difference of opinion was said to have caused bitter quarrels between the two women.

Farley Shows There's Lots of Money

Even the sight of money rolling off the printing presses at the Bureau of Engraving failed to influence John S. Cohen, Atlanta publisher, to take over the job of wiping out the Democratic party's $524,000 deficit. He is shown with Postmaster General Farley, who offered Cohen the job of treasurer of the National committee. Below is Walter J. Cummings, who did accept the job.

Hot Tips Cool As D. C. Police Hunt Dillinger

Frenzied Search of Roads Fails to Yield Any Trace of Bandit.

Washington became "Dillinger conscious" last night as warnings were flashed to police headquarters that the bandit-killer had "just been seen" here.

The city postoffice was searched, highways from Baltimore to Washington were patrolled, and special detectives were dispatched to different points seeking the desperado that several citizens were "certain" they had seen.

But Dillinger—if it was John Dillinger—continued to remain as successfully under cover as he has ever since his sensational escape from the Crown Point (Ind.) jail. From Baltimore came a "tip" that Dillinger, with a colored man, was driving toward Washington in a car bearing District license plates. A citizen told police he had made a "positive identification." Baltimore police detailed an armored car to the search.

The armored car didn't succeed in overhauling the suspected automobile. The phantom travelled so fast, in fact, that no sooner had headquarters hung up the receiver after talking to Baltimore than a woman 'phoned Washington police that she had seen the fugitive in the City Postoffice, "just a minute ago."

Without waiting to assemble a riot squad, a lone detective was ordered to investigate, but he found nothing. Only the postal clerks were surprised.

The possibility that Dillinger might be here caused Maryland and District officials to place cordons of police throughout this territory. Capt. B. W. Thompson, assistant chief of detectives, ordered outlying precincts to watch District Line highways. Baltimore's armored car was assigned as a cruising arsenal to patrol Baltimore boulevard. Prince Georges County authorities guarded other highways to Baltimore. The State police substation near Frederick, Md., was ordered to be on the look-out.

State Auto Chief Shot; Woman Dies

N.O. Gray Found Wounded on Country Lane.

Frankfort, Ky., March 14 (AP).—Mrs. Myrtle McCrocklin was shot to death and Nathan O. Gray, head of the automobile department of the State, seriously wounded by a pistol shot on the Louisville road 3 miles from here today.

Alex Julian, a farmer, reported to police he found the couple in a sedan which had turned off the main highway into a lane. G. C. Wainscott, policeman, who went to the scene, said the body of the woman was under the steering wheel and that Gray lay unconscious on the right side of the front seat. Wainscott said he took a pistol from Gray's hand.

Gray was said to be in a critical condition at a local hospital. Mrs. McCrocklin was secretary to Gray.

90, He Asks Divorce From Bride of 70

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 14 (AP).—After two years of married life, Ephraim E. Brown, 90, has been granted a divorce from Mary Dow Brown, 70.

Brown charged that his wife "abused and mistreated" him in arguments over money and she took $50 from him by force as he lay in bed, crippled by rheumatism.

Blast Kills 150 at Port In Salvador

President Martinez in Charge of Relief and Rescue.

La Libertad, El Salvador, March 14.—(Via All-America Cables.)—(U.P.).—Local authorities estimated 150 persons were killed today when 150 cases of dynamite exploded while being unloaded on the docks here.

Forty burned and injured were sent to hospitals in San Salvador, where the explosion was plainly heard.

President Hernandez Martinez hurried to the port from the capital, 22 miles inland, to take charge of relief and rescue work.

The cause of the terrific blast was unknown. All workmen on the dock were killed instantly when the dynamite went up with a mighty roar. Flames immediately enveloped both dock and warehouses.

The explosion occurred as workmen were unloading the dynamite from a ship and placing it aboard two freight cars.

The repair shop of the steamship company, where the men were unloading the barges, was blown into the harbor, with all the barges and workmen on them. The warehouse contained 15,000 bags of coffee, which were destroyed.

A large stock of gasoline also stored there burst into flames. Firemen were rushed to the scene from all nearby towns.

Authorities said not a building in town escaped damage. The All-America Cables station was damaged, but communications continued without interruption. The steamship offices, port building and telegraph and post offices were badly damaged.

The fire was under control before nightfall.

The port of La Libertad was full of visitors and tourists, but most of them were at the beaches when the disaster occurred.

Damage was expected to run into hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Infants Are Rescued From Hospital Blaze

Albany, N. Y., March 14 (AP).—Many infants were removed to safety from the Brady Maternity Hospital in the Pine Hills section of Albany today when fire broke out in the institution.

Army Services Held For 2 Crash Victims

San Antonio, Tex., March 14 (AP).—Funeral services with military honors for flying Cadets Nelson T. Samuels and J. W. Carson, of Kelly Field, plane crash victims, were conducted here today.

Cadet Samuel's body will be sent to Baltimore, Md., and later to Arlington Cemetery at Washington, for burial and that of Cadet Carson to Spartanburg, S. C. The cadets were killed yesterday when their observation ship crashed near Camp Bullis.

Farley Gives Treasury Post To Cummings

Illinois Democrat Was Woodin Aid; Cohen Declines Post.

Appointment of Walter J. Cummings, of Illinois, as treasurer of the Democratic National committee was announced yesterday by Postmaster General Farley. He will succeed Frank C. Walker, of New York, who resigned after he was appointed director of the National Emergency Council.

Farley announced the appointment following a conference Tuesday night with Cummings, Walker and former Senator John S. Cohen, of Atlanta, vice chairman of the National committee. It was reported that Farley offered the appointment first to Cohen, who declined to serve.

Cummings came to Washington in 1933 as executive assistant to Secretary Woodin. He was placed in charge of all the closed banks of the country following the bank holiday. In August of last year he was made chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Salamanch's Cabinet Resigns in Bolivia

La Paz, Bolivia, March 14 (AP).—The complete cabinet of Bolivia resigned today, giving President Salamanca the privilege of organizing a new ministry.

$50,000 Bank Holdup Booty Is Recovered

Greenville, S. C., March 14 (AP).—The entire $50,000 obtained by bandits who held up a South Carolina National Bank messenger here last Thursday was recovered today.

Where it was found was not revealed. However, R. P. Willimon, previously under bond in the case, and an unnamed Negro were brought in when officers returned with the money.

Treasury Offices Moved.

Milan, Italy, March 14 (AP).—The United States Treasury office here received notice today that it will close April 1 and be transferred to Paris. All European Treasury offices are to be sent there.

House Vote Restores 10% Pay, Boosts Veteran Allowances; St. Lawrence Treaty Beaten

Senate Balks Ratification

Roosevelt Suffers First Major Defeat on Waterway.

Democrats Help To Reject Treaty

President Plans to Send Revised Plan Back for Approval.

Suffering his first major defeat on Capitol Hill when the Senate yesterday rejected the St. Lawrence waterway treaty by a vote of 46 to 42, President Roosevelt remained undismayed and announced he would send the pact back later in its present or a revised form for ratification.

Although the President's defeat was decisive, opponents of the treaty mustering ten more votes than an absolute one-third of the entire Senate, if pairs are counted, it was not irrevocable. But it is believed Mr. Roosevelt will seek Canada's consent for modification of the treaty before it again is referred to the Senate.

Ratification of a treaty requires a two-thirds majority of those voting. With 88 votes cast yesterday ratification required 59 votes or 13 more than the total actually supporting the treaty. Thus the St. Lawrence pact took its place along with more than a score of important treaties which the Senate has refused to ratify, including the Versailles treaty.

Many Treaties Rejected.

Among the treaties rejected by the Senate during the history of the Nation were several dealing with waterway projects and boundary lines. As in the case of the Panama Canal, several of these finally won Senate ratification after many years of bitter debate and hostility.

Even before the Senate unexpectedly voted on the treaty six hours before the time limit specified, the White House conceded defeat, but promised to continue the fight for construction of the St. Lawrence waterway as an international undertaking.

President Roosevelt fears that unless this country finally agrees to a treaty for joint action, Canada will proceed alone, since the cost would be only about $100,000,000, regarded as insignificant at the White House, and penalize American vessels with heavy tolls for use of the waterway.

Pact Not Killed.

Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, indicated also that the treaty might come back. He said the Senate vote did not kill the treaty but only sent it back to the President, who could seek Senate ratification again later.

Modification of the treaty was intimated by Senator Pittman, however, before any return trip to the Senate. He said he believed many of the fears engendered by the treaty and expressed in the Senate debate were groundless and that if he were correct he felt certain Canada would agree to revisions which

Nogales, Ariz., March 14 (AP).—One private air-mail service operated in the United States today. The regular mail plane of Western Air Express passed through Nogales en route from Los Angeles to Mexico City.

R. C. Weil, assistant manager, said here the Mexican mail is being carried free from Los Angeles to Mexicali, the first border point, and from there to the Mexican capital under contract with the Mexican government.

Indians, Riled by Movies, Put Pale Faces Out of Tribe

Gallup, N. Mex., March 14 (AP).—The pale face Indians—such notables as Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford and Jimmy Walker—were read out of the Navajo Tribe today.

The Navajo council, composed of twelve real, copper-skinned braves, issued the decree abolishing all honorary memberships in the tribe, while other Indians went on the warpath in Hollywood, demanding that their race no longer be represented on the screen by Mexicans, Chinese, Hawaiians and Negroes.

The council's resolution banned from the tribe anyone who is not a Navajo by birth.

In Hollywood, Jim Thorpe, noted Indian athlete, and Many Treaties, described as a Blackfeet Indian chief, led the uprising. They petitioned Sol Rosenblatt, film code deputy administrator, for a separate code to govern the 500 Indians engaged in picture work, filing forceful objection to picturization of other races as Indians.

Industrialists Unite in Fight On Labor Bill

Solid Front Presented to Wagner; Recovery Menaced, Claim.

Industry united yesterday against the Wagner bill to revolutionize bargaining powers of employers and workers in what may prove the greatest fight between capital and labor America has ever known.

The measure was stanchly defended before the Senate Labor Committee by its author, Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, National Labor Board chairman, and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins. Both witnesses characterized passage as vital to National recovery.

Senator Wagner explained the bill would make the National Labor Board a permanent fixture. Enforcement powers of the agency would be drastically broadened. Employers would be strictly forbidden from dominating labor organizations.

At the National Recovery Administration the National Labor Board held hearings in an endeavor to avert threatened automobile strikes in the Michigan, St. Louis and Cleveland areas, with the American Federation of Labor and company union members charging one another with coercion and employers and their lawyers on the scene ready to enter the fight.

Industry Fears Strife.

Spokesmen for the National Association of Manufacturers—yet to appear before the committee—declared industry stood as one man for the first time since creation of NRA, aroused over imminent danger that peaceful relations between employers and employes, built up over a long period of years, would be obliterated.

Industriallists proposed as an alternative to the Wagner bill a broad investigation by Congress into employment relations. Frankly alarmed, more than a score of the country's outstanding manufacturers and financiers met in New York to perfect a defense program.

Senator Wagner warned that wages again were lagging behind production and profits and "if this disparity continues we may expect another collapse."

He told the committee his bill would:

1. Prevent employers from dominating labor organizations by influencing their formation, policies or elections, by subsidizing them, or by discriminating either in favor or against particular unions by means of wage or hour differentials or other conditions of employment.
2. Make it "perfectly clear that the closed union shop is not illegal."
3. Provide that employers should recognize those unions chosen by their workers and should make

Opponent of Modern Improvements Dies

Enid, Okla., March 14 (AP).—Thomas P. Hopley, 80, who never stopped fighting paved highways, automobiles, tobacco and other modern devices and customs, died here today.

He frequently issued handbills expressing his views and his last one came out last week, calling for the organization of a new Oklahoma prohibition party.

Lumber Men Pledge Compliance With Code

Memphis, Tenn., March 14 (AP).—Several thousand circle or small hardwood sawmill operators today pledged themselves to full compliance with the lumber code after receiving assurance from hardwood manufacturers institute officials that the question of adequate price differentials may be reopened at a meeting of the institute's coordinating committee in June.

Lorton Probe Fails to Find Any 'Scandal'

Pitts and Rheem Vehement in Denying "Special Privileges."

Deflation of the Lorton Reformatory scandal, blown up by the sensational charges of Representative Shoemaker, former convict, and his informant, Edward Bedell, former Lorton inmate, was completed last night when the investigating committee adjourned indefinitely.

W. W. Millan, chairman of the committee, said the committee would take no more testimony, unless further charges against the institution are made by Representative Shoemaker. Apparently the committee is satisfied the accusations brought forward so far are without foundation.

Yesterday the committee held its session at the reformatory and among other witnesses heard G. Bryan Pitts and Edmund D. Rheem deny with indignation that they were accorded special privileges or were permitted to make trips to Alexandria to see their wives.

Exoneration Likely.

Committee members would not make a definite statement as to the future course of the investigation, but it is believed that they will ask Representative Shoemaker for any further evidence of misconduct. In the event that he makes no further charges, the committee's report will probably completely exonerate institution officials.

Pitts and Rheem, dressed alike in blue trousers, white shirts and blue pull-over sweaters, were the first witnesses heard yesterday. Both denied ever having left the reservation except when taken to Washington for legitimate court purposes.

Pitts, whose hair is graying and who looks thinner and older, told the committee that he was ill when he was brought to the prison and that because of this he was assigned to the "bankers porch," then part of the hospital. He said he had been there ever since.

Luxuries Imaginary.

Denying the porch is more comfortable than any other part of the prison, Pitts said: "That is absolutely absurd. There is only one laundry basket, there is one spigot,

Police Hijacker Gets 4-Year Term

Norfolk Man Guilty of Whisky Holdups.

Norfolk, Va., March 14 (Spl.).—George C. Shackleford, was sentenced to four years in prison today on the charge of hijacking a police patrol wagon loaded with 1,000 gallons of whisky seized from him. Shackleford told the jury Patrolman E. R. Benjamin, who was driving the wagon, had been on his pay roll for some time. He said he supplied Benjamin with whisky and lent him money. Benjamin denied the charge.

Assistant Commonwealth Attorney James E. Heath, jr., in summing up the case for the State, said there were members of the Norfolk police force on the pay roll of bootleggers but Benjamin was not one of them.

William Clyde Baker, a pal of Shackleford implicated in the hijacking, and who was tried [illegible] month, got off with one year in jail. Baker also accused Benjamin of being on Shackleford's pay roll.

Indicted for Roosevelt Letter.

Atlanta, March 14 (AP).—Robert Daniel Jones, of Fairburn, has been indicted by a Federal grand jury on a charge of mailing an obscene letter to President Roosevelt. Jones is alleged to have mailed the letter on or about January 25.

Democratic Rule Upset

Five-and-Five Plan Now Appears Sure

By J. D. Secrest.

The House yesterday, in turbulent session, rebelled against the Democratic gag rule and adopted compromise amendments to the independent offices appropriation bill only granting part of the Government employes' pay restoration and increased veterans' allowances voted by the Senate.

It was the second time this week that sufficient Democrats broke away from House party leaders to overthrow the President's recovery program and adopt legislation which he has threatened with a veto. Only two days before the House had adopted the Patman cash bonus plan by a vote of 295 to 125.

By adopting the 5-and-5 pay-restoration amendment, the House virtually assured the final enactment of this program into law. It is now believed that both the Senate and the President will accept this compromise unless disapproval of the veterans' amendments brings a veto to the entire bill.

Pay Amendment.

The pay-restoration amendment provides that Government employes shall have 5 per cent restored, retroactive to February 1, and an additional 5 per cent July 1. The remaining 5 per cent could be restored during the next fiscal year at the discretion of the President.

The final vote on the pay amendment was 185 to 101.

The Senate now will have the opportunity either to adopt the House amendment or to send it to conference as it already has voted 41 to 40 for full pay restoration July 1.

A compromise program, oddly enough sponsored by the ranking Republican member of the Appropriations Committee, Representative John Taber, of New York, was adopted on veterans' allowances.

The compromise increases the al-

Former Smoot Aid Kills Self

Wife Finds W. T. Carruth Dead With Gas Tube in His Mouth.

Suicide was blamed yesterday in the death of William T. Carruth, 31, lawyer, and secretary to former Senator Reed Smoot, Utah.

His body, a gas tube in his mouth, was discovered by his widow, Mrs. Patricia Carruth, a Treasury Department employe, when she returned to their apartment in the 3100 block of Connecticut avenue northwest.

Mrs. Carruth, semihysterical from grief, told police she knew of no reason for the act. She said her husband was in good health and had been free from financial worries.

Investigators learned Carruth failed to appear yesterday at his offices in the Smith Building. He left no notes.

Friends recalled that Carruth at one time was an employe of the Senate Finance Committee. He was closely associated with Ernest Smoot, son of the Senator, questioned recently in connection with fees he received from private employers while clerk of the finance committee. Carruth, however, did not figure in the Senate investigation.

Born in Blackford, Idaho, Carruth was graduated from the University of Idaho and the George Washington University Law School. His parents reside in Oakland, Calif.

The Carruths have no children.

Return of "Slain" Man Frees Seven Suspects

Shelbyville, Tenn., March 14 (AP).—[illegible] Billy" Martin, for whose [illegible]ng" his brother and six Negroes have been arrested, returned today in good health with the explanation he had been "South for a while."

Martin dropped from sight January 1 and during an investigation of his disappearance charred bones were found in a deserted cabin on the farm of his brother, Felix Martin, near here. Those held for his "murder" were ordered released.

New Bureau to Lead Visitors Through Alphabetical Maze

In an effort to unscramble the alphabetical tangle of Federal recovery agencies for the benefit of Washington visitors, the Government yesterday opened an official information service.

One of the purposes of the new agency is to discourage lobbyists and make it unnecessary for visitors to employ someone to help them "see the right person."

The information bureau is at room 500, Commercial National Bank Building, Fourteenth and G streets northwest.

At the beginning five persons will be employed. There will be a telephone switchboard connecting with Government departments.

The bureau is under the direction of the National Emergency Council. It is explained that most visitors who come to Washington on business are bewildered by the multiplicity of recovery offices and the wide territory over which they are situated.

Frequently a visitor is shunted from office to office all over town.

Persons having business with the Government are invited to use the office. They will be asked to state their business and will be told with whom it should be taken up.

The National Emergency Council has published a loose-leaf manual answering hundreds of questions concerning recovery agencies. The manual has been placed in the hands of State directors of the Emergency Council and of other persons who are likely to be asked questions concerning operation of recovery agencies.

Senate Page Snubs Cummings' Sedan

Boy Is Particular With Whom He Rides.

Walter Fry Rucker, Senate page, is particular with whom he rides.

Before coming to Washington from Greensboro, Walter, smallest page in the chamber, received explicit instructions from his father on Capitol behavior. Consequently, when his mother was unable to meet him after the session, he was waiting, with a policeman as guard, for a taxicab to take him home.

Driving by in a fine Department of Justice limousine, Attorney General Cummings saw the boy and offered him a lift, but Walter, instructions fresh in his mind, declined, saying:

"No, thank you; I was told by my parents not to ride with strangers."

Huge Aviation Fund Allotted For President

der a single head has not been revealed.

Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, former Army Air Corps chief; Charles A. Lindbergh, Eddie Rickenbacker, World War ace, and Clarence Chamberlin, as a group, have been mentioned as possible members of the board and, individually, as the head of the new bureau, whichever it may be.

The fact that Mr. Roosevelt unexpectedly called on Congress to augment the Army Air Corps appropriation in the War Department supply bill by $10,000,000 to give him a fund with which to experiment and promote aviation development seemed to indicate his plan has been formulated and only details remained to be worked out.

The President sent his message asking for the fund to the Senate, where the War Department bill had been reported Tuesday. He gave no explanation for his request, other than to refer to an attached letter from Director of the Budget Lewis Douglas, which approved the appropriation.

Appropriation Without Strings.

Mr. Douglas in his letter set out the form in which the appropriation should be made, and that form was adopted by Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, in offering the amendment, which was passed without objection and apparently without more than a few members realizing what was happening.

Subsequently Senator L. J. Dickinson (Republican) Iowa, protested against giving the President large sums to spend without restrictions. He said the $10,000,000 constituted a "jack pot" for the President to do with as he pleased in aviation matters.

The amendment, attached as a rider to the War department bill, provided the $10,000,000 was "to be expended in the discretion and under the direction of the President, for improvement, development and augmentation of military aviation material and for training of military aviation personnel, including the purchase and or construction of buildings and other necessary military aviation facilities and employment of civilian personnel, notwithstanding the limitations contained in any appropriation for the Army Air Corps, fiscal year 1935, to be immediately available."

25 Million For Air Corps.

The War Department bill appropriated $25,396,000 for the regular functions of the Army Air Corps for the fiscal year starting July 1.

Senator Copeland said he understood the additional $10,000,000 was not to be used for purchase of planes but for experimentation and general development of aviation under the President's direction. He said the testimony taken by the Appropriations Committee earlier in the week indicated the Army planes were fully equipped to carry the air mail but that the five-year building program had been allowed to lag as a result of the economy program.

Shortly before the Senate took this action it twice adopted the temporary air mail bill, already passed by the House. The first adoption came on a viva voce vote after Senators Simeon Fess, Ohio, and Robert D. Carey, Wyoming, both Republicans, made lengthy speeches urging that the air mail be taken away from the Army at once.

Senator Fess, heard by only a handful of Senators, undertook to show that "no fraud" was involved in the air mail contracts canceled. Senator Carey's contention was that the Army was ill-prepared to fly the air mail routes.

Senator Long Votes No.

After the bill's viva voce adoption, Republican Leader Charles L. McNary, Oregon, said the Republican side did not wish to further delay action but it wished a roll call on the measure. This was granted, with 20 Republicans and 1 Democrat—Long, Louisiana—voting "no."

At the outset of the day's debate on the bill, Senator Carey moved to recommit the bill to the Postoffice and Post Roads Committee. Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson moved to table this motion, which was done, 61 to 29—all but five Republicans favoring favoring the Carey motion.

The bill as adopted authorizes the Army to carry the mails for a period not longer than one year, transfers the necessary funds to defray the cost from the Postoffice Department and provides for war-time pension rates to survivors of Army men killed flying the mails.

The bill also contained an amendment by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, requiring only standard equipment be used in flying the mails and that all personnel assigned to that task be fully and adequately trained.

The Senate gave no consideration to the amendment authorizing the Postmaster General to make temporary 90-day air-mail contracts with private operators without competitive bidding. This was sponsored by Senator McAdoo (Democrat), California.

Meanwhile, House and Senate committees continued work on the bill revising the air mail laws. The Senate Postoffice and Post Roads Committee decided to summon as witnesses Col. Lindbergh, Clarence Chamberlin, Gen. Mitchell and Rickenbacker and to give an opportunity to be heard to all former air-mail contractors wishing to testify.

Rickenbacker in Capital.

"Eddie" Rickenbacker arrived in Washington late yesterday. It is possible he may be asked to record on Secretary of War George H. Dern's committee of inquiry in place of Orville Wright, who yesterday announced that due to illness he could not accept the appointment. The committee was named Tuesday to investigate operations of the Army Air Corps. Chamberlin, Lindbergh and a group of Army officers comprise the committee.

Senator Robinson's proposal for a unified air policy, under a "fighting head," made Tuesday in the Senate and a forerunner of what developed yesterday, received general applause, Chairman J. J. McSwain of the House Military Affairs Committee said such a step is necessary "if we are ever to be ready to defend our Nation in war."

Senator Robinson would leave out of his unified agency the Naval Aeronautics Bureau, but would include the Marine Corps flyers. Secretary of the Navy Claude Swanson said he would be inclined to oppose concentrating either the Navy or Marine Corps flyers in a unit with other aviation functions, pointing out both had functioned efficiently.

Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the Air Corps, yesterday morning started out on an inspection trip of air-mail routes, flying to Newark. Later he proposed to head west and come back by way of Atlanta. He may issue orders for a resumption of air-mail flights from some place along his itinerary.

Gen. Mitchell May Win Long Fight for Unified Air Corps

Ousted From Army Post for Activity, He May Gain Victory.

Possibility that Brig. Gen. William Mitchell (retired) will be appointed to head a unified Federal air service or some other new air setup growing out of the present aviation controversy brought to the front again yesterday the long fight of which Mitchell has been the center.

Since 1925 Mitchell has been the storm center of American aviation. Fiery and outspoken, the former Army officer has never overlooked an opportunity to criticize what he believed inefficiency in military and naval aviation. Neither has he ever overlooked an opportunity to plead for an air service separate from the Army and Navy.

It was Mitchell's insistence on these things that brought about his retirement from the Army following trial and conviction by court martial. Mitchell was in command of the American air forces overseas in the World War. He is a professional soldier, having come up from the ranks. Born in 1879, he enlisted as a private at the age of 19. He served in the Spanish-American War and the Philippine Insurrection.

Spoke Out of Turn.

Following the war Mitchell was made assistant to the hed of the Army aviation forces. From the beginning he demanded that the service be taken away from ground-minded military men and turned over to air-minded fliers. Then came the Shenandoah disaster and a number of other majoor accidents in the air.

In spite of his comparatively subordinate position in the Army, Mitchell spoke his mind. He testified before Congressional committees where he asked for a unified service. Following the Shenandoah disaster, he characterized administration of the War and Navy Departments as "incompetent, criminally negligent and almost treasonable."

He was taken before a court-martial and tried for insubordination. The court found him guilty and the case was reviewed by the judge advocate general's department and passed on by Secretary of War Davis to President Coolidge. Coolidge characterized Mitchell's conduct as "highly censurable," but fixed the penalty at five years' suspension from the Army on half of a colonel's pay. Less than a week later Mitchell resigned his commission and has since been a private citizen.

Air Fight Redoubled.

But Mitchell didn't resign his fight for a unified air service. He redoubled it. He wrote books and magazine articles, he made speeches and he testified before Congressional committees. Always he has phrased his criticism and suggestions in fiery and sometimes picturesque language.

It is known that some Government officials would like to see Mitchell at the head of the air service. Others feel that perhaps he is temperamentally unfit for the job. Whether or not he is appointed, if the service is unified he will have won a victory in a fight to whichd he has devoted many years of his life.

Mitchell has been prominent in the discussions which have followed cancellation of mail contracts and flying of the mail by the Army. He had lunch at the White House Tuesday.

The same day he wrote a letter to Senator Black, chairman of the Senate Mail Contract Investigating Committee. He upheld the President in his action in turning the mail job over to the Army, pointing out that it was only through this move that "we discovered the appalling state of the most important of our National defense."

River Treaty To Be Pushed By Roosevelt

President Sure Route to Ultimately Triumph in Senate.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

The United States Senate notwithstanding, man will continue to follow nature and the St. Lawrence waterway eventually will become an accomplished fact. That is the conviction of President Roosevelt.

Even before the Administration's first major failure yesterday, it became known the President believes rejection of the treaty with Canada is only temporary. He intends to press it again and again, confident —like truth—it ultimately will prevail.

For nature itself ordained the waterway, he feels, and the only question lies in whether this country will help Canada build it, and thus enjoy equal partnership rights, or sit by and idly watch its neighbor construct it alone.

As for the latter course, the President is represented reliably as feeling real danger exists that Canada, if going it alone, might exercise its legal perogative and favor Empire shipping to the detriment of the American merchant marine.

Visions Canadian Way.

The prospect Canada eventually would build the waterway is no idle threat, in the opinion of Mr. Roosevelt. He is emphatic in the belief the St. Lawrence River and the Great Lakes form such an obvious passage into the heart of the continent as to demand development.

Only enlargement of canals about the International section, near Odgensburg, N. Y., and the Lacine rapids below Montreal would be necessary for Canada to take over the project as an all-Canadian waterway. Eliminating the proposed powed dams in this area, the President understands it would be entirely feasible for the Dominion to enlarge these canals for the relatively insignificant sum of $100,000,000.

Thus with a seaway all its own, Canada would have the legal—if not moral—right to allow free passage to Canadian and British shipping and impose charges on American commerce. Such discrimination could be reciprocated—although no mention was made of such a possibility by this Government at the Panama canal.

Holds to Common Law.

Concerning the fear of Illinois that not enough water would be diverted to care for its drainage canal, Mr. Roosevelt believes the old common law prohibiting the inequitable diversion of water should apply. Canada has already given Chicago the right to use enough water for its canal, and the policy of the Government is to respect the interest of the Dominion in Lake Michigan.

For centuries the principle has been established that no one has the right to detour the natural flow of water where others have common rights without replacing it, it was pointed out at the White House, which feels this prohibition is also part of international law.

Disappointed, without doubt, on the outcome of the treaty vote, nevertheless the President will continue his championship of the waterway. Throughout he has maintained keen interest in its passage, going so far as to use his personal persuasion on individual Senators.

There was no lfkelihood anything further will be done at this session. On the other hand, there was no doubt the White House will keep the issue well to the forefront, probably reviving it for another vote next year. Acceptance, the Administration feels, has merely been delayed.

Strikes Near In Automobile Labor Battle

Company Union Leaders, A. F. of L. Men Hurl Bitter Charges.

The embers of labor warfare, which have been smoldering in the automobile industry since the manufacturers won inclusion of the "merit" clause in their code last September, were brought before the National Labor Board in Washington yesterday.

In a packed, smoke-laden hearing room, the board listened to details of the fight which, unless it is settled here, will throw the Michigan, St. Louis and Cleveland automobile area into a turmoil of strikes.

The industry, long unorganized, has witnessed a race between employer-sponsored company unions and the American Federation of Labor. Yesterday's hearings, punctuated by sharp exchanges, bursts of applause and jeers, considered charges brought by an A. F. of L. affiliate against the Buick and Fisher Body companies of General Motors and the Hudson Motor Car Co.

The charge was made that the manufacturers had raised wages and shortened hours two days ago as "bait." They were accused of firing men for joining the A. F. of L. and of discriminating against them in other ways. Fro mthe company union side, spokesmen who said they paid their own fares to the hearing but get their regular pay for the time taken off, replied that Federation organizers had enrolled men by threatening to run them out of town. The company union spokesman for the Chevrolet group was greeted with derisive laughter when he said his organization had gotten more benefits for the men in a few months than they had gotten in five years previously.

Another engaged in an altercation with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor and member of the labor judicial body. Green asked if he thought it fair that men be discharged for their union affiliations. The worker replied that he did if the men paraded "under two flags" by belonging to both the company organization and the American Federation of Labor.

Newton D. Baker, sitting with the employers, told newspapermen he was merely a "spectator." Others present were William S. Knudson, executive vice president of General Motors; Donaldson Brown, another vice president, and John Thomas Smith, the company's general counsel; Edward A. Fisher, vice president of Fisher Body Corporation, and Chester Culver, general manager of the Detroit Employers Association, which represents all plants except the Ford Motor Co.

William Collins, American Federation of Labor organizer who made sensational charges of employers' "spy" systems at the "NRA Field Day" two weeks ago, was the federation's chief spokesman.

Dissenting Duke Case Opinion

Justice O'Donoghue Calls Disbarment Too Severe and Urges Freedom of Criticism of Courts Instead of Curb.

I agree with the majority of the court in finding the respondent guilty of the charges preferred against him in both disbarment cases, Nos. 64 and 65, but on the following ground:

In the criminal conspiracy case, the respondent as attorney for the appellants did not have a copy of the transcript of the testimony taken at the trial. The United States district attorney did, but refused to allow respondent to see it in order to prepare a bill of exceptions. This refusal was uncommendable.

The respondent prepared an admittedly inadequate draft of a bill of exceptions. Thereupon, the assistant United States district attorney, who tried the conspiracy case, prepared a draft of a bill of exceptions which did not contain a summary of the testimony of all the witnesses nor did it contain all the exceptions taken at the trial, nor did it give each of the defendant appellants the benefit of all the exceptions taken by any defendant at the trial in accordance with the stipulation in the case to that effect. These omissions and errors were the result of mistake in judgment rather than intentional or willful dereliction of duty on the part of the assistant United States district attorney. Nevertheless, this last-mentioned draft of the bill of exceptions was to the extent indicated incomplete and inadequate. The United States district attorney did not personally take part in the trial of the criminal case, nor in the preparation of this last-mentioned bill of exceptions.

This Draft Relied On.

The trial justice relied upon the draft of the bill of exceptions prepared by the Assistant United States Attorney, as he had a right to do, and since the respondent as attorney for the appellants failed to designate specifically, as was his duty, any defects therein when the opportunity was afforded him, the trial justice, acting in good faith, approved the draft of the bill of exceptions as prepared by the Assistant United States Attorney.

Under these circumstances, the respondent as attorney for the appellants might well complain, even vehemently, in the Appellate Court of the shortcomings or defects of the bill of exceptions, but his charges filed in the proceedings on appeal against the trial justice and the United States District Attorney were unjustifiable and false. Likewise, his charges against the same justice set forth in an affidavit of prejudice filed in the civil suit of Rasmussen vs. Hoover pending in this court were also unjustifiable and false.

The respondent in both instances knew the charges were unjustifiable and false, or at all events he did not have reasonable grounds for believing them to be justifiable or true.

Accordingly, the respondent is guilty as charged in both cases.

However, I am constrained to dissent from the majority of the court in regard to the disbarment of the respondent. The respondent was not charged with the commission or conviction of a c rime involving moral turpitude nor was he charged with defrauding or with dereliction of duty to a client. These are the two principal grounds justifying the severe penalty of disbarment whereby an attorney is irrevocably deprived of his livelihood.

Asks Leeway in Criticism.

The respondent, maybe through malice or maybe through a misguided and overzealous solicitude for the real or supposed rights of his clients, has criticized, spoken ill of, slandered a justice and a public official of his court.

The finding of the respondent guilty is sufficient vindication of the justice and official, if any vindication of their probity were needed. But to inflict the extreme penalty for criticism of public officials, including judges, though criticism be unjustifiable and false, tends to suppress all criticism.

Freedom of criticism of public officials, like freedom of the press, had better suffer from some abuse rather than be stifled or destroyed by too severe penalties for their infractions. The consciousness of rectitude is the solace of the just.

Under all circumstances of the case, it would seem that disbarment of the respondent for life from the practice of his profession is an excessive penalty and that the ends of justice would be best served by suspension of the respondent from the practice of the law for a reasonable period of one year.

Court Orders Disbarment Of Jesse Duke

Attorney Unable to Back Representations About Rover, Letts.

Finding Jesse C. Duke, member of the District bar, guilty of "professional misconduct" in making serious charges against Leo A. Rover, former United States attorney, and Justice F. Dickinson Letts, which he was unable to substantiate, the District Supreme Court yesterday ordered Duke's disbarment.

The opinion was concurred in by Chief Justice A. A. Wheat and Associate Justice Jennings Bailey. A minority dissenting opinion by Assoicate Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue held that Duke was guilty of two charges of misconduct, but should be punished by suspension from practice for a year.

Charges were leveled at Duke by the grievance committee of the Bar Association after he made allegations that Justice Letts and Rover had sent to the Court of Appeals a "deleted, diluted, incomplete, inaccurate and false" bill of exceptions in a criminal case in which he was prosecuting an appeal.

Action Called "Reprehensible."

Later, in a civil case in the District Supreme Court, Duke filed an affidavit of prejudice against the same two, setting forth the accusations previously advanced by him.

The majority opinion supported Justice Letts' action in signing the disputed bill. It said that * * * "Charges imputing a lack of integrity and common honesty to the district attorney and to the court in the preparation and signature of the bill was most reprehensible.

"The charge that the trial justice 'handpicked' the jury is without color of justification or excuse. In questioning the prospective jurors, no distinction was attempted between those who had been identified with organizations favoring prohibition and those opposed thereto."

While agreeing with his colleagues that Duke was guilty, Justice O'Donoghue asserted there were omissions and errors in the bill of exceptions. These he attributed to mistake of judgment rather than intentional or willful dereliction of duty on the part of the Assistant District Attorney who drew up the bill.

Justice Letts relied upon the bill "as he had a right to do" and Duke, it was shown, failed to specify "as was his duty, any defects therein, when the opportunity was afforded him."

Duke, he said, might "well complain, even vehemently, in the appellate court, of the shortcomings or defects of the bill of exceptions." Further, the minority opinion held "the respondent in both instances knew the charge was unjustifiable and false, or at all events, he did not have reasonable grounds for believing them to be justified or true."

Slander Is Charged.

Duke "maybe through malice, or maybe through a misguided or overzealous solicitude for the real or supposed rights of his clients, has criticized, spoken ill of, slandered a justice and a public official of this court," the opinion said. Pointing out that the finding of guilty was sufficient vindication for Justice Letts and Rover, Justice O'Donoghue said that "to inflict the extreme penalty for criticism of public officials, including judges, though criticism be unjustifiable and false, tends to suppress all criticism."

"Freedom of criticism of public officials, like freedom of the press, had better suffer from some abuse rather than be stifled or destroyed by too severe penalties for their infraction," Justice O'Donoghue said.

Industry United for Struggle Against Wagner Labor Bill

"reasonable attempts" to arrive at satisfactory agreements.

4. Provide for a permanent National Labor Board with adequate enforcement provisions.

Promises Strike Remedy.

Wagner insisted the bill would foster "frank and friendly" negotiations between employers and employes and prevent strikes by "fair treatment to all parties." Under questioning by Senator Robert F. La Follette (Republican), Wisconsin, Wagner said he was "terribly concerned" over the prospect of "tremendous difficulties" ahead if labor were not protected.

"I think this is one of the most important bills considered by the Senate in a long time,' Miss Perkins testified. "Establishment of a labor board is a very important step forward in relations between employers and employes and in the practice of democratic principles."

A need for equal opportunities was cited by the Labor Secretary.

"We have come to a time," she said, "when it is necessary to establish a judicial tribunal to determine certain things in the relationship of employers and employes. There has been apparent a great disparity in the last ten years between the opportunities of employers and employes, while under our democracy all men are supposed to have equal opportunities."

Wagner Challenged.

The opening broadside in the bombardment against the Wagner proposal was fired by the manufacturers' board of directors with issuance of a statement challenging Senator Wagner to produce all industrial relations facts, including the total of union dues paid by workers.

Wagner was charged with seeking more extensive powers for the Federal Government than those it exercised in time of war. The organization denied existence of an emergency sufficient to justify passage of the proposed legislation.

"There can be no doubt, from a careful reading of the bill," the directors contended, "that it would not be an instrument for alleviating labor disputes, but would project new issues of such a controversial nature into the battle for economic recovery that the upward movement might be further halted. It would not equalize bargaining power, but would confer monopolistic powers upon one minority group, to the virtual exclusion of the common rights of the mass of workers."

Claims Employers Barred.

The statement contended employers would be barred from effectively negotiating directly with employes in the interest of industrial harmony and continuity of operation.

"The bill," the directors argued, "would make the Federal Government a muster-sergeant for unionizing the millions of workers who, for their own good reasons, have declined adamantly through the years to affiliate themselves with National unions.

"Section 7 (a) of the National recovery act, guaranteeing workers the right to choose their own form of bargaining with their employers, would become so many idle words as organizers set out, with the weight of the Labor Board behind them, to force workers to pay tribute to support an organization which has never been able to attract more than a small percentage of the Nation's wage earners."

Every effort, the manufacturers added, "should be bent now upon putting idle men back to work and restoring purchasing power instead of seeking social reforms. This cannot be done while unions, through strikes, are offsetting the gains through reemployment.

"The basic purpose of the recovery act was to raise wages, shorten hours and eliminate unfair working conditions, and while the Government, in cooperation with industry, is moving steadily in this direction, it is plain that there should be no hasty legislation which might endanger the program."

Union Coercion Charged.

Coercion of workers was laid at the doorstep of union organizers by the industrialists.

"An inquiry would show the great extent of coercion of workers by union organizers and members and that the growth of employe representation plans, through which workers deal with their own employers in an industrial democracy, has been a mutual benefit to labor, industry and the public.

"It would develop that in disregard of the Nation's welfare union organizers have so disturbed the automobile industry that production has been seriously crippled in these plants, which are endeavoring to lead the way back to normalcy by consumption of steel and other products of the slow-moving industries."

Personal criticism of Senator Wagner voiced by the manufacturers was based on the contention that he converted the Labor Board into a "brow-beating" agency rather than a conciliatory arm of the NRA, as contemplated in the original setup. The chairman was charged with threatening to use force instead of gaining results by negotiation.

Indorse 6 for His Job.

The industrialists recalled they had indorsed six men for chairman of the Labor Board in case the rumored resignation of Senator Wagner should materialize. The names were submitted to the NRA Industrial Advisory Board, which sent them to the President.

Included were Charles P. Neill, of Washington, former commissioner of labor statistics; Ernest Martin Hopkins, president of Dartmouth University; Wallace Brett Donham, dean of the graduate school of business administration, Harvard University; Clark Howell, publisher, of Atlanta; Herbert Farrington Perkins, of Chicago, former International Harvester Co. president, and Charles Nagel, of St. Louis.

Among the directors participating in the Wagner bill statement were E. C. Heidrich, jr., former associate of Bernard Baruch on the War Industries Board and retired president of the Illinois Manufacturers Association; Robert L. Lund, board chairman; C. L. Bardo, president of the New York Shipbuilding Co.; S. Bayard Colgate, president of the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co.; F. A. Merrick, president of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., and George H. Houston, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works.

Nazi Youths 'Persuade' Agents to Ban Book

Freiburg, Germany, March 14 (AP). Nazi youths became literary censors in Germany today. They applied pressure to prevent the circulation of Michael Cardinal von Faulhaber's new book, "Jewdom, Christiandom and Germandom."

The Nazis—members of the Hitler youth organization—prevailed upon booksellers to cease selling the book, which they asserted "grossly discredits the German people." The cardinal's book makes reference to the "Teuton's laziness and intemperance."

Lorton Inquiry Fails to Find Any Favoritism

there is no hot water. There is no carpet on the cement floor and the furniture is identical with that of every dormitory."

Both Pitts and Rheem declared that they had never paid or had been asked to pay for anything at the institution. They denied that they paid a convict named Joe Barry for the privilege of living on the porch. It had been charged that Barry acted as a "go-between" in collecting the "rent."

When the committee adjourned yesterday afternoon they inspected the porch. It consisted of two narrow rooms, containing 12 beds, lockers, three chairs and a radio. In one corner several pictures, painted by one of the inmates, were hanging. All of the dormitories have radios.

Music With Meals.

As the committee left the institution they watched the inmates file into the dining room to the tune of a march played by a prison band. The band, which occupies a raised platform in the dining hall, plays during both dinner and supper every day.

Rheem said that he was quartered on the porch because he might suffer bodily harm from the other inmates because of the confidential nature of his prison work. He is in charge of the prison canteen, where tobacco, candy and other small articles are sold to prisoners and guards.

J. E. C. Bischoff, business manager of the institution, was on the stand for about a half hour in the afternoon. He presented documentary evidence to refute specific charges of corrupt practice in the purchase of material and equipment. C. W. Hanger, chief accountant, denied that the prison books had been manipulated.

Barnard Recalled.

Other witnesses, chiefly guards, were called to the stand. They denied Shoemaker's accusations that liquor flowed freely; that the prison had a drug problem, and that immorality was uncurbed.

Col. William L. Peak, superintendent of the reformatory, and Capt. M. M. Barnard, superintendent of the District penal institutions, were the last to be heard. Barnard refuted the sensational statement of Shoemaker that he had left his car, loaded with machine gun, shotgun, rifle and pistol, to be used by certain prisoners to escape.

Others who gave testimony were George W. Bennett, Washington banker, doing time; Herbert R. Haar, prison engineer; Paul F. Pegelow, captain of the guard; William Devers, steward; Lester E. McMenamin, mail clerk; Max Cady, guard; Edward G. Welch, assitsant superintendent, and Thomas V. Norman, clerk.

Cummings Named Party Treasurer

tion to become chairman of the board of the Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. He was placed in that position by Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. This appointment was made after the RFC had bought a large block of stock in the bank. The appointment was made over objection of some of the bank's directors.

Cummings was born in Springfield, Ill., and educated in Chicago, where he received an honorary degree of doctor of laws at Loyola University. He is president of the Cummings Car & Coach Co., and has been in the manufacturing business since 1904. Although he is a lifelong Democrat, he has never been active in politics.

Farley announced Cummings will return to Washington within a week to assume his new duties. At that time, Farley said, a new finance committee will be appointed, and the task of paying off the party deficit will be undertaken. The job of treasurer of the committee at the present time consists principally of raising sufficient money to pay off that deficit, which totals $524,000.

Farley still has before him the appointment of a new secretary of the committee to suceed Robert Jackson, who resigned after President Roosevelt let it be known he was opposed to party officials combining their committee jobs with Washington legal practice.

Cohen Voices Approval.

"I feel that the party is fortunate in securing for committee treasurer a man of such outstanding prominence and ability 'as Cummings," Farley said.

Commenting on the appointment, Cohen said:

"There could have been no more admirable appointment. I am sure that it will meet with the hearty approval of Democrats throughout the country."

Farley spent much of yesterday with Cohen. Among other things they took a look at new money coming off the presses at the Bureau of Engraving. It was said that not even the sight of the new money would persuade Cohen to undertake the job of wiping out the party deficit.

West Virginia Votes Changes For Assembly

Reapportionment Reduces Representation of 8 Counties.

Charleston, W. Va., March 14 (Spl.).—Final legislative approval was given by the Senate today to a House bill providing a reapportionment of the membership of the House of Delegates, the first change of the kind since 1915.

The measure reduces the representation of eight rural counties and increases that of six industrial counties. Berkeley, Braxton, Jackson, Mason, Preston, Randolph, Roane and Wetzel Counties are to have one delegate each instead of two. As the House membership remains at 94, the 8 memberships are redistributed as follows:

The Mingo County delegation is increased from one to two; Logan, one to three; Raleigh, two to three; Cabell and McDowell, four to five each, and Kanawha, six to eight.

Another Bill Pending.

A Congressional redistricting bill already has been passed by the Legislature, shifting seven counties to new districts. A senatorial redistricting measure, increasing the number of districts from 15 to 16, is pending in the Senate.

The Senate today approved the bill providing for an annual 50-cent fee on motor driving licenses, replacing the present $1 perpetual fee, the proceeds to increase State police.

After going back to the House with a minor amendment, the measure became involved in a parliamentary tangle following a vote which lacked three of approval. A motion to reconsider was tabled and doubt was expressed whether the bill could be called up again.

Revenue Fight Grows.

The deadlock between Senate and House over emergency revenue was accentuated today in the Senate approval of numerous amendments to Gov. H. G. Kump's bill, enacted by the House. The bill was shorn entirely of the 20 per cent luxury tax passed by the House. It calls for a 3 per cent consumers' sales tax as against a 2 per cent tax adopted by the House, and an increase of 20 per cent in the existing taxes on utilities and other corporations as against a 60 per cent boost approved by the House.

The bill requiring employers to furnish the State tax commissioner with the names of employes receiving $600 or more annually, to facilitate collection of the gross income tax of 1 per cent, was passed by the House and sent to the Governor.

Coast Guardsman Gives $200 Bond

Depositor Charged With Threatening Bankers.

Princess Anne, Md., March 14.—George Walter, 30, Coast Guardsman, was released under $200 peace bond here today by Magistrate Edgar A. Jones, following his arrest last night for allegedly threatening the lives of Arthur Andrews, cashier, and W. Edelen Webster, assistant cashier of the Deals Island Bank, now being liquidated by the State banking commissioner.

Walter is said to have written threatening letters to Andrews following closing of the bank, in which Walter had $2,400 on deposit. He also is said to have threatened William B. Spiva, president of the Bank of Somerset here, and one of the founders of the Deals Island Bank. The bankers refused to press any charge, simply requesting that Walter be placed under peace bond. The letters were not placed in evidence.

Walter has been a member of Coast Guard for eight years and is stationed at Norfolk.

Contracts Announced For Span and Roadway

Westminster, Md., March 14 (Spl.).—Thomas, Bennett & Hunter, contractors, this city, have been awarded State contract for 1.2 miles of concrete roadway in Harford County. The bid of $123,450.90 is for approaches to the bridge over the Octoraro Creek on the Conowingo-Rising Sun road.

The Forbes-Murphy Construction Co., of Baltimore, was given the contract for the double-span, deck-plate girder bridge, with concrete flooring and substructure, the bid being $64,835.10.

Muddy Roads Force Doctors To Make Calls on Horseback

Princess Anne, Md., March 14 (Spl.).—Somerset County physicians have been forced to turn back the clock a quarter of a century and revert to modes of transportation in vogue 30 or more years ago.

The severe freeze and the subsequent thaw and rains have converted the dirt roads of the county into bottomless quagmires, making them impassable except for horses or on foot.

Old-time saddle-bags have been dragged out and local physicians are making their calls on horseback or foot. One physician was compelled to walk more than 5 miles to reach a patient, and every day walks of from 2 to 5 miles are necessary for the county physicians to make their calls.

School buses have been forced to abandon their routes, and many school children are unable to reach the centralized schools.

In Mount Vernon District, residents are forced to ferry across the Wicomico River, and drive north to Salisbury, in order to reach Princess Anne. East Princess Anne District, Dublin, Perryhawkin, Revells Neck, Venton, Oriole and Mount Vernon are completely cut off from the county seat, the only traffic being by horseback or on foot.

Business here is virtually at a standstill, and observers say the roads of the county are in the worst condition ever noted.

L. W. Summers Will Address Farmers Club

Maryland U. Group Plans Fiftieth Anniversary Banquet Saturday.

Representative Hatton W. Summers, of Texas, will be the principal speaker at the fiftieth anniversary banquet of the Vansville Farmers Club Saturday at the University of Maryland.

The speakers' list also will include Dr. H. B. McDonnell, president of the club, who will give a resume of the historic organization. Music will be furnished by the university glee club.

The club was founded in Prince Georges County on March 17, 1884, in behalf of better farming. Its membership is limited to 16 farmers or persons taking an outstanding interest in farming.

Among its achievements is listed the securing of the first appropriation for the converting of the Washington-Baltimore boulevard into a concrete highway, and the procurement of the Maryland good roads system.

It was at the instigation of the club that the State took over from private control the Maryland Agricultural School, now the University of Maryland.

Present members are W. P. Magruder, F. W. Sheets, A. F. Woods, Dr. Thomas B. Symons, J. S. S. Clark, Carl Frey, Judge J. H. Shepherd, secretary; W. F. Gude, B. F. Brandon, J. Enos Ray, Russell Magruder, Perry Boswell, Alex Gude and H. C. Byrd.

Scottish Castle Injunction Voided

Charles Town, W. Va., March 14 (Spl.).—An injunction against foreclosure sale of the Scottish Castle, historic Jefferson County showplace owned by Mrs. W. F. Hallam and Mrs. Helen M. Gladman, has been dissolved, according to word received here.

Public sale of the estate to satisfy claims of the Greenbrier Joint Stock Land Bank had started February 13, when Circuit Court Judge D. H. Rogers granted a temporary restraining order.

Further investigation showing the grounds for the injunction to be inadequate, Judge Rogers rescinded his order yesterday.

Potato Growers Asked To Keep Crops Down

Pocomoke City, Md., March 14 (Spl.).—Potato producers of the lower Delmarva Peninsula are warned not to increase their early potato acreage above the 1933 average by A. E. Mercker, secretary of the Interstate Early Potato committee.

The small acreage aided by last year's drought were important factors, the expert asserted, in enabling growers to average $4 a barrel for their early potatoes. Even with the same acreage as last year, he said, prices will be lower since several thousand more carloads can be shipped in a normal season.

Fairmont, W. Va., March 14 (Spl.).—Although Drexel R. George, former deputy sheriff, is alleged to have cost Marion County $230,000, the county is ready to put up an additional $3,000 to catch him.

Warrants have been issued charging George with embezzlement. The county court at first offered a reward of $1,000, but has now raised that to $3,000 if he is delivered to the county authorities, or $2,500 if he should be taken into custody outside of the county.

Danville Police Seize 30 Machines; Arrests Due.

Danville, Va., March 14 (Spl.).—A police squad today seized nearly 50 slot machines in a series of raids, and warrants will be issued against their lessors tomorrow.

According to Chief of Police Martin, men were employed to play the machines and register the results before the seizures were made. Word of the raid got out before the police finished their job and some of the machines were removed.

Support Wage Is Aim of New CWA Aid Plan

All Able Are Required to Work Under Rules of Relief Chief.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 14 (Spl.).—Under the new relief set-up, work will be resumed for all able-bodied persons on the rolls, but only enough work will be allowed to pay subsistence wages, said CWA Administrator H. C. Brooks, who returned yesterday from a conference at Charleston. The new program goes into effect April 1.

The new plan, it is said, in a measure returns relief to the welfare board which was in charge before CWA was created. It is designed to encourage search for private work.

Varied relief amounts under the new plan would be given in work hours, according to the needs of each family. A man with a large family in need will require a certain number of hours' work a week; a man with fewer dependents fewer work hours.

At present, when needy families are taken off work relief under the weekly reduction orders, a certain number of them are turned over to direct relief, where they are given cash orders for needed subsistence supplies. The new program will do away with this, except for those unable physically to work, who will still be kept on direct relief. All others will be required to work out their payments. Seed issues, such as were made last year, will be made again, and the recipients will work out these charges also, it is indicated.

West Virginia relief officials will expedite the subsistence projects for different parts of the State, similar to the one at Reedsville, where jobless miners are being transplanted to farm land with homes. There is a possibility that a similar project may be put under way for this section, Mr. Brooks believes.

The State is to be divided into five districts, announced State CWA Administrator W. N. Beehler at the conference, consisting of about ten counties each.

Empty Bottle Racket Revealed Making Thieves of Children

Hagerstown, Md., March 14 (Spl.).—Authorities have revealed an "empty milk bottle racket" here, which has cost local dairies $7,000 last year in replacements.

This amount represents about 135,000 bottles which disappeared. One local dairy alone reported replacements last year cost $2,500.

Two arrests were made last week. One man was given a hearing yesterday, but was dismissed for lack of evidence. The other case was continued.

Captain of Police Clarence Emmert said the racket is not confined to here, but extends to adjacent States, reaching as far south as Harrisonburg, Va. The worst feature of the racket, said Emmert, is that it is making petty thieves of youngsters.

The bottles are stolen from doorsteps, yards and grocery stores by youngsters who sell them to men, who in turn sell them to milk distributors at a fraction of their original cost.

The racketeers also have been collecting beer bottles and are reported to be paying boys 25 cents a case and getting 75 cents from distributors.

Youths caught taking empty bottles admitted they sold them to men whom they named. The home of one of those taken into custody was found almost filled with bottles.

Keep Men at Work— and Preserve American Industry!

THE duplication of sugar refining operations in the Tropics is permitting a rising flood of imported refined sugar that has already resulted in a loss to refineries in the United States of a market equivalent to a sugar-consuming population of 15,000,000.

For 200 years, the United States sugar refining industry has kept pace with the rapid growth of our country—making possible the great development of the raw sugar industry in the tropical islands. As a result America provides the greatest market for sugar in the world. There is no desire now to hamper the progress of raw sugar production in those areas where it has always been produced most satisfactorily. But there is every reason to protest against encouraging the duplication of refineries in the Tropics that put Americans out of work here.

The encouragement of agricultural effort in the natural producing areas, and the encouragement of manufacturing effort in the great consuming areas, is logical and has always proved most efficient. It is the policy of Canada, England, France, Italy, Japan and Australia in their handling of this vital product. Colonial empires safeguard the refining industry at home from duplication even in their own colonies!

But aside from the logic and efficiency of this long-established principle, no American can conscientiously favor a national policy today that must result in the closing of industries in the United States. Such policy means not only throwing workmen out of their jobs in United States refineries, but through the curtailment of operations, also cripples a wide variety of businesses. Domestic refineries, for instance, spend tens of millions of dollars for cotton, coal, oil, lumber, paper, power and other supplies, which must inevitably suffer if refineries in the tropical islands are encouraged to duplicate the work of domestic refineries.

Yet that very policy of encouraging duplication of American industry overseas to compete against American industry at home is now actually before Congress for consideration! Workmen in the United States are asked to compete with the conditions surrounding labor and living in the Tropics. United States workers are employed under the provisions of N.R.A., which does not apply, for instance, to Cuban sugar refineries.

You, as a consumer of sugar (one of the vital food products of the nation), have a guarantee of quality and fair prices in the intense domestic competition that exists among all factors of the sugar industry.

The United States sugar refining industry is not adequately safeguarded from overseas competition; and you will never have a guarantee of the continued supply of refined sugar at all, if the sugar refining industry is eventually removed from your own country.

"Men are never so likely to settle a question rightly as when they discuss it freely."

Layman Flays Redistricting Act in Virginia

Permits Doubling Up by Factions, Senator Says of Plan.

New Castle, Va., March 14 (AP).—The senatorial redistricting bill passed by the Legislature is "unique," State Senator George W. Layman asserts in an attack on the measure.

The Senator explained why he voted against the bill, which places Roanoke City, Roanoke County, Radford City, Montgomery, Floyd and Franklin Counties in the same senatorial district, with the privilege of electing two members of the Senate.

He said by gerrymandering and political maneuvering, it is possible for the cities to elect both Senators or for the counties to do likewise.

A political combination effected by the counties can elect the two Senators if the counties agree on their candidates and receive the assistance of a "disgruntled" element in Roanoke City, Senator Layman said, adding:

"I wanted a district composed of Roanoke City and County and another district of Montgomery, Franklin, Floyd and the City of Radford. The bill which was passed established a bad precedent, for in no other section of the State have cities and counties been combined to have two Senators, and especially, as in this case, where the counties have ample population for a Senator and the cities have population to entitle them to a Senator."

Brown and F. T. Rudacille. The district chairmen will later organize into a county committee.

Artillery School In Virginia Sought

Resolution of Assembly Asked Establishment.

Richmond, March 14 (Spl.).—From the mass of legislation adopted by the General Assembly, several interesting resolutions have been unearthed.

One introduced by Senator Wright invites the War Department to consider establishing a Field Artillery school in Virginia.

Senator Norris sponsored a joint resolution, which was approved, calling on the State commissioner of fisheries to confer with Maryland authorities and establish the northerly line on the Maryland side of the Potomac River to better define the waters of the Potomac from the creeks, so the rights of Virginians may be protected.

Hearing of Doctor In Killing Slated

Appalachia, Va., March 14 (Spl.). Dr. C. A. Hutchinson was free on bond today following his surrender Monday after he killed Dewey Hunycutt, 29, on Main street here.

"He made an insulting remark about my wife," Dr. Hutchinson told John Fletcher, town manager, after walking to the City Hall to surrender.

Fred B. Greear, Commonwealth's attorney, recommended that Hutchinson be released under $4,000 bond. A preliminary hearing is set for Saturday.

Senator Cather Cites Benefits Of Assembly Acts He Backed

Winchester Member Calls School, Auditing and Legal Bills Best.

Winchester, Va., March 14 (Spl.). State Senator T. Russell Cather, of Winchester, representing this city and the counties of Shenandoah, Frederick and Clarke in the Assembly, highly praised the work of the 1934 session when he returned yesterday following adjournment.

"The General Assembly, as a whole, did a fine piece of work," he declared.

He said the school bill, the bill reorganizing the State's legal department, the bill limiting the amount charged by the auditor of public accounts for auditing the financial records of counties, and the DeJarnette Sanitarium bill were the outstanding pieces of legislation he sponsored.

He added that under the school bill Virginia definitely went on record, for the first time in its history, in favor of a minimum school term, while reorganizing the legal department provides that only members of the Attorney General's department can represent the State in any legal capacity.

Senator Cather was specially pleased with the bill limiting the charges which may be assessed against a county for the audit of its books. Whereas the charges assessed against Frederick County last year totaled $1,800, the work this year can not cost the county more than $400. The limit in Clarke County is $300 and Shenandoah County $500.

War Garb

Men's Clothing Declared Military-Inspired.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 14 (Spl.).—That present dress styles of men originated mainly from war influences was the contention of Dr. Robert Astrop, professor of psychology at the University of Richmond, in an address last night before the local chapter of the Westhampton College Alumnae Association and their guests.

The speaker said the high evening hat evolved from the lofty helmet of Napolieon's soldiers, the stiff front shirt developed from the breastplate, and the necktie came from the leather thong which once dangled from the throat of the armored warrior.

Prof. Astrop identified the useless buttons of his coat sleeve with the "ingenious device invented by Frederick the Great to discourage a practice common among his troops of using the sleeve as a face towel."

Roanoke College Debaters in Lead

South Atlantic Champions After 4-State Tour.

Salem, Va., March 14 (AP).—After a sensational victory march through four States, Roanoke College debaters today had the South Atlantic championship to show for their forensic labor.

With 10 victories in 12 debates, the Maroon arguers set a fast pace, twice defeating North Carolina State, 1933 National champions, in the tournament at Greensboro.

Roanoke's negative team, composed of James E. Palmer, jr., of Roanoke, and Edwin Hayden, of Salem, was the only undefeated team in the tournament. The affirmative team, composed of C. B. Thornton, jr., of Salem, and J. Forest Jamison, of Roanoke, lost only two debates in six.

Bristol Votes For Flannagan

Democratic Rally Backs Representative; Other Delegates Split.

Bristol, Va., March 14 (Spl.).—Bristol Democrats have administered a blow to opponents of Representative John W. Flannagan, jr., by instructing their delegation of 25 to vote for his renomination at the Ninth district convention to be held here Saturday.

A largely attended mass meeting adopted the resolution of indorsement, offered by Henry Roberts. The meeting was the first held since the surprise announcement Saturday that former State Senator Robert P. Bruce would be offered by Wise County delegates as a candidate for the nomination, and the action of Tazewell County Democrats Saturday in refusing to instruct their delegates for Flannagan.

It was announced yesterday that Senator Harry Flood Byrd would deliver the keynote address of the nominating convention Saturday at 11 a. m.

Flannagan backers said yesterday the Bristol indorsement would check the surprise movement against him. Flannagan now has pledged to him the delegations from Bristol and the following counties: Lee, Washington, Buchanan and approximately half of the Russell delegation. Dickenson, Smyth, Pulaski, Scott and Wise County delegates will come here uninstructed.

Released CWA Men Begging for Work

Luray, Va., March 14 (Spl.).—Workmen who have been released from CWA projects in this county are begging for work from private contractors building highway bridges. Many men declare they are worse off than when the CWA projects were launched, asserting that increased prices have absorbed all they made.

The contractors are paying wages lower than CWA projects paid, with longer hours. At the various places where bridges are being built, lines of men stand each morning pleading for work.

Virginian Dies Of Bullet Laid To Hush Plot

Portsmouth Victim Was to Have Been Witness Against Bandits.

Portsmouth, Va., March 14 (Spl.). Clarence Lilley, 21, who was shot February 18 in a barbecue stand here, died last night in King's Daughter Hospital.

Lilley and Clarence Whittaker were asleep in a rear room of the place when they were fired on through a rear window. Lilley received a bullet in his spine which caused death. Whittaker was wounded several times, but will recover.

Lilley was to have been a witness in the case against three men accused of attempting to rob Myer Jacobson. Jacobson was held up in front of his home in this city and Lilley was supposed to know the identity of one or more of the highwaymen.

The police believe Lilley was shot to prevent him from testifying in the Jacobson case, and that Whittaker was just an innocent victim. They say they expect arrests shortly.

Tydings Warns Relief Funds Must Be Cut

Federal Cast Viewed as Menace to Budget, Interest Cited.

Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, in an address yesterday warned that Federal relief expenditures must be curtailed sharply before next winter in order to keep the budget in balance.

Senator Tydings said that by the end of the next fiscal year the National debt would approximate $32,000,000,000 and pointed out that interest at 3 per cent and a 2 per cent sinking fund on that debt would require $1,600,000,000 annually.

He pointed out that with the Government's income approximating $2,800,000,000 only about $1,200,000,000 would remain for all ordinary purposes after paying interest and sinking fund charges on the debt.

"As the veterans alone now draw upward to a billion dollars a year," said Tydings, "in compensation and benefits, sufficient money will not be available with which to run the Government. Thus we must either raise more money by increasing taxation or by borrowing more money, which in the end must be paid off by increased taxation. Obviously, unless this situation is realized by the American people, serious disaster lies ahead."

President's Power Intact

Roosevelt Strategy Uses St. Lawrence Treaty, Soldier Aid Revolts to Strengthen New Deal in East, West.

By Elliott Thurston.

Those whose habit, if not business, it is to draw deductions from the passing political performance probably will deduce that Mr. Roosevelt's prestige with Congress is slipping because the House ran away form him on the bonus and the Senate booted his St. Lawrence treaty into the discard. Actually, Mr. Roosevelt's leadership, while it may seem at first glance to be dented, is not seriously challenged.

Neither the bonus nor the treaty offers a convincing test of his authority over Congress. Neither represents a party issue, or an issue between the New Deal and the opposition, and neither is directly bound up with the Roosevelt recovery program—except as defeat of the bonus would fortify the Administration in its promises to preserve a sound currency and to achieve, ultimately, a balanced budget.

If the Senate should pass the bonus bill—which it will not—and so give Mr. Roosevelt an opportunity for a vigorous veto his prestige with the country would be enhanced rather than diminished, and the reflex would be a tightening of his already secure grip upon Congress.

Fall Elections Near.

Mr. Roosevelt did not trouble to put pressure on the House. Quite possibly he could not have whipped his own party ranks into line. But in any case, it was not worth the effort, as he saw it. After all, the House has been running away from Presidents on the bonus for some years. All members of the House come up for election this fall. All, or nearly all, figure that a vote for the bonus stands to gain rather than to lose votes in most Congressional districts, and certainly all recognize that the House vote is the most obvious sort of political gesture—costing nothing, since the Senate is sure to kill the bill, or if not, the President will do it. Mr. Roosevelt could afford to be philosophically indulgent about the "revolt" in the House.

Moreover, the raising of the issue gives him a fresh opening to say that he opposes printing press money and is solicitous about the budget—and it has certain political advantages in putting the Republicans on the spot. For they can not have the sound money and budget issue, which they are hopeful of working up, and have the bonus, too. For this reason, the astute Republican leader, Senator McNary, is maneuvering to have the bonus bill conveniently sidetracked to a committee where it can languish in a pigeonhole. Failing that, he is telling his group that they must vote against the bonus to preserve their position on sound money and the budget.

"Smothering" Foreseen.

While voting against the bonus may embarrass a few Democratic Senators who come up this fall, it equally embarrasses the still larger number of Republican Senators who are up for election this year—and those Republicans who vote for it will be highly vulnerable if they then try to make a case against the New Deal dollar or budget. The chances are that the Sentae will smother the bill in committee. If not it will be badly beaten on a vote.

A year ago the Senate killed the bonus, 62 to 18. The only Republicans, still in the Senate, who voted for it were Cutting, Frazier, Robinson of Indiana (who are up this fall), Norbeck, Nye, Schall and Steiwer. Fourteen other Republicans who come up for election this year voted against it, along with 13 more who are not up this year. Thus, as a party, the Senate Republicans are on record against the bonus and are not likely to swing over to the other side now. Inasmuch as the Legion, and the veterans' spokesmen in the Capital, did not ask for the bonus at this time, the political risks in voting against it are slighter than ever. Anyway, Mr. Roosevelt's "setback" in the House is due to be offset by victory in the Senate.

Treaty Is Not Issue.

As for the treaty, it is no more a party issue than the bonus. It cut directly across party lines on the final vote with some of Mr. Roosevelt's champions voting against him and some of his opponents voting with him. More interesting, however, is the view that one of his chief reasons for advocating the treaty was to make good with the wheat belt farmers who voted for him in 1932 and imagine that the waterway would cut 6 cents a bushel off the transportation costs on their wheat. had the Republicans as a party beaten the treaty the Administration hardly would have refrained from making the most of it politically with the wheat growers. As is stands, the Westerners will charge that the wheat belt was let down on this issue by the East. Although the power trust issue was left in the background during the Senate debate, the additional political charge will be made, on behalf of the New Deal, that it was the utility barons, along with the big railroads, who helped to spike the treaty.

Political Strategy.

Thus out of the political background on both the bonus and the treaty, the President is likely to gain much more than he loses, politically. That is, he stands to solidify himself where he needs to hold ris strength, and to lose, if at all, only in the sections where by 1936 he must look for the stiffest opposition, the most likely revolt against him. His stand against the bonus robs the opposition of a point against him in the conservative East. His stand for the treaty tends to strengthen him, at the expense of Eastern Republicanism, in the West.

The deduction that he has sustained a setback seems superficial by long-range political tests. It is easier to demonstrate that both the Congressional knocks are political boosts.

Fund Allotted For Air Survey Of Arboretum

Anacostia Area Will Be Plotted for Roads and Tracts.

Development of the National Arboretum project in Anacostia moved another step forward yesterday when the Public Works Administration announced allotment of $10,000 for an aerial survey of the area.

The survey was deemed necessary by officials of the Bureau of Plant Industry, which is building the arboretum, because only through this means can an adequate topographical map be drawn upon which will be plotted proposed roads, trails and buildings.

For the last six months 80 CCC recruits from nearby Fort Dupont have been clearing the area of underbrush. They have also built some roads and trails, but these are temporary.

Previously, the PWA had alloted $386,000 for land purchases, pursuant to an executive order by President Roosevelt. Four of the six tracts of land whose purchase was authorized have been acquired. The completed development will occupy between 600 and 800 acres of land.

The arboretum will be a gigantic testing station in which will be planted, for experimental purposes, every variety of tree that can thrive in this climate. Construction of a number of greenhouses also is included.

Contract Is Awarded For New High School

Contract for construction of the Woodrow Wilson High School at Fortieth and Albemarle streets northwest was awarded yesterday by the District Commissioners to McCloskey & Co., of Philadelphia, which submitted a low bid of $1,043,000. The building is to be completed in 18 months.

Waterway Pact Beaten

Roosevelt Suffers First Major Defeat on St. Lawrence.

would eliminate the basis for objections.

Senator Robert M. La Follette (Republican), Wisconsin, perhaps the most ardent advocate of the treaty, said the vote was a victory for the power trust, which feared the experiment in producing cheap power which would be included in the St. Lawrence project.

Opposition to public development and ownership of power sites, however, was only one of three factors which inspired hostility to the treaty. Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, who frequently has fought private power companies, for instance, was one of the most effective opponents of the treaty.

Other Issues.

In addition to the power issue, local considerations and the opposition of the railroads were factors in the treaty's defeat. Civic organizations in virtually all the North Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico ports fought the treaty on the ground that construction of the St. Lawrence waterway would divert commerce they now enjoy.

The railroads were active against the treaty, fearing loss of freight. Perhaps the most effective segment of opposition to the treaty was the railway labor brotherhoods, which fought it on the ground that it would mean additional unemployment for their members.

Although the Senate could have gone on debating the treaty until 6 p. m. yesterday, it was decided as soon as the body convened at noon to proceed to a vote. All proposed reservations were withdrawn by their authors, Senator LaFollette had read a newspaper editorial urging ratification and a roll call was ordered.

Democrats Bolt.

The Democrats can not blame the Republicans for blocking the treaty, since 22 members of that party bolted the Administration, joining with 20 Republicans in voting against ratification. The treaty was supported by 31 Democrats, 14 Republicans and 1 Farmer-Labor.

Those who voted for ratification were:

Farmer-Labor—Shipstead.

Those voting against ratification were:

Democrats—Adams, Bailey, Byrd, Clark, Connally, Coolidge, Copeland, Dietrich, George, Lewis, Lonergan, Long, McCarran, McGill, Neely Overton, Reynolds, Russell, Stephens, Tydings, Wagner and Walsh.

Republicans — Austin, Barbour, Carey, Davis, Dickinson, Goldsborough, Hale, Hastings, Hatfield, Hebert, Kean, Keyes McNary, Metcalf, Patterson, Reed, Steiwer, Townsend, Walcott and White.

The only pair announced was that of Senators Norbeck and Mrphy, favoring ratification and Senator Glass opposed. Absent during the roll call and without their position being announced were five Democratic Senators, Mrs. Caraway, Fletcher, King, Trammell and Thomas of Oklahoma.

Inquiry Asked.

Immediately after the vote Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, asked unanimous consent for consideration of a resolution providing for appointment of a special committee of seven Republicans to inquire into charges made during the debate by Republicans that the treaty "betrays American rights and interests to a foreign country."

The resolution would instruct the committee to summon the former Republican Secretaries of State Charles E. Hughes, Frank B. Kellog and Henry L. Stimson, who assisted in negotiating the treaty, to be interrogated regarding these charges. The Senators proposed for the committee included Republican Leader Charles L. McNary.

Senator McNary objected to consideration of the resolution and it went to the table.

The rejected treaty provided for the construction of a 27-foot channel from Lake Ontario down the St. Lawrence River to Montreal, with a system of locks at the eastern end of Lake Superior and a dredged channel between Lakes Huron and Erie. A series of locks also would be built between Lakes Erie and Ontario, with a dam and canal system at the International Rapids near Ogdensburg, N. Y., and below the International Rapids.

This waterway would be capable of carrying 13,000,000 tons of commerce annually at a saving of $97,000,000, engineers estimated, and would permit ocean liners to dock at Chicago. As a by-product the waterway would produce 2,200,000 horsepower of electricity which would be divided between New York and Canada.

The cost of the project to the United States was estimated at $272,453,000, although this figure was challenged. It also was estimated the construction of the waterway would take between seven and ten years to complete.

Plans to Send Revised Treaty Back Later to Senate.

Ijams said Mr. Roosevelt would review the parade here on Army Day. Secretary Dern and Gen. John J. Pershing will speak at a dinner.

Affront to Judge Costs Him 20 Days

As Taylor left the courtroom he complained audibly of Judge Given's decision. A policeman, sitting among the spectators, grabbed Taylor.

"You may keep your friend company in the District Jail for 20 days," Judge Given ruled.

Disillusioned.

Consistent readers of this page need no reminder of our heretofore unalloyed allegiance to the sea serpents which slither shamelessly in various sections of the seven seas. We have taken the position that the burden of proof is not on the fortunate few who have seen the great snakes, but rather on those who have not seen them. For us, as attentive students of this cock-eyed world, it is axiomatic that such monsters exist. Only proof to the contrary will satisfy us.

Or, more correctly, would have satisfied us up to yesterday. For late last night there crossed our desk a baneful copy of the Hungarian Tourist News. This tells us that as long ago as 1460 a "monster of hell" dwelt in the Danube and on occasion turned the tables on fishermen by swallowing them with more dispatch than concern. This has severely affected our faith. We reason thus: The Hungarian Tourist News exists to lure us (and others) to Hungary. But we (not speaking for others) are certainly not going to Hungary to satisfy the hunger of "monsters of hell." Therefore, the H. T. N. must figure (a) that such monsters are not to be taken seriously and/or (b) that they are a good drawing card for tourists.

And, either way, we are disillusioned. Did the Rotary Club of Loch Ness inspire the serpent there? Has clever Cunard Line publicity created the one seen twice by officers of the Mauretania? Is the Vancouver Chamber of Commerce responsible for the weird denizen of Juan de Fuca? Such doubts assail us and doubts have no place in editorial sanctums. Hereby we swear this page off sea serpents. After all, considering their antiquity, the news columns are where they properly belong.

Ship Subsidy Policy.

With a noticeable and refreshing absence of ballyhoo Secretary Roper has presented to Congress a new subsidy policy for American shipping. Believing that the present ocean mail subsidy plan has been a costly mistake and should be abandoned, Mr. Roper has worked out a comprehensive alternative scheme to maintain our merchant marine and to strengthen it where desirable. The contrast between his approach and that of Mr. Farley in the air-mail contracts is emphasized by the Secretary of Commerce himself, as follows:

> The new subsidy policy should be gradually introduced, replacing old subsidy contracts in fairness and equity, and, if possible, through mutual agreement, to prevent demoralization of the industry.

Mr. Roper recognizes that American ship building and operating costs are the "highest in the world," and that Government aid is essential to keep an American fleet on the seas. He proposes, therefore, that direct subsidies be granted to cover the differentials in construction and operating costs, and to allow for "trade penetration." The latter class of subsidies is designed to aid American shipping on routes where foreign competition is strongly intrenched. Close supervision over subsidized lines and construction companies would be maintained and all contracts would be awarded on the basis of competitive bidding.

It is no easy task to develop a subsidy policy which shall be both constructive and free from extravagance and abuse. Congress may be able to make improvements in Secretary Roper's recommendations. But the plan of granting to essential lines direct benefits based on cost differentials seems a distinct advance over present procedure. Certainly this method, calculated to safeguard the shipping industry while protecting the taxpayer, is far more constructive than that which has been followed in the air-mail tangle.

Lo, Poor Jimmy!

Troubles never come singly—at least not to former Mayor James J. Walker, late of New York, later of the Riviera. A few days ago he was publicly charged with income-tax evasion. Now the Navajo Indians have expelled him from honorary membership in their tribe.

The tribal council moved with appropriate speed through its solemn session at Gallup, N. Mex. And expulsive action was not directed solely against the genial Jimmy. It canceled all honorary tribal memberships. Hereafter no palefaces will be entitled to the rights and privileges of the tribe. You can't be a Navajo unless you are born that way. Nevertheless, one council member did make specific references, of an uncomplimentary character, to Mr. Walker and "a lot of movie stars."

In the words of the ballad: "It's hard, boys, it's hard." Probably the former mayor and the movie luminaries joined-up in the belief that the Navajos were like the Masons: "Once a Mason, always a Mason." And now they discover that those redskins are a lot more like a building and loan association, which drops you when you don't pay dues. Still Jimmy has the consolation of knowing that the Navajos weren't the first Indians to drop him. There was also the tribe of Tammany.

Defeat On Demerits.

Defeat of the St. Lawrence treaty in the Senate is not to be construed as a revolt against the Administration, although it frustrates a project in which President Roosevelt is deeply interested. Some attempts were made to invoke party loyalty in support of the treaty, but the vote showed a general disregard of party lines. The treaty seems to have been lost because of its own deficiencies.

Some of President Roosevelt's most ardent supporters were among the 22 Democrats who recorded adverse votes. Sectional interests were more dominant than political. Senators who feel that their States would have been adversely affected were joined by a large group which believes that this is not the time to undertake a vast international project designed to provide cheap transportation for agricultural exports and to furnish cheap power, chiefly to New York.

The St. Lawrence project was planned in the heyday of prosperity when our Middle West was shipping large quantities of wheat and other products of the farm to Europe. Now our wheat exports have dwindled to a small trickle, chiefly from Pacific ports under Government subsidy. The need for additional transportation facilities between the Middle West and the Atlantic Coast has disappeared, and the problem at present is the development of additional rail traffic rather than the diversion of that which exists. Moreover, transportation rates have been substantially reduced since 1929. Arguments for the development of vast new power resources have also lost much of their former effectiveness. Steam power is now produced at a cost which challenges the development of expensive water power projects, especially where existing facilities are sufficient to meet the probable demands for some years to come.

Control over the water of the Great Lakes was also a point of controversy. Under the treaty the United States would have lost exclusive control over Lake Michigan. Fear was expressed that Canada might divert water through its Georgian Bay to the detriment of the United States. In this respect the treaty appeared to be especially favorable to Canada, but various other provisions are regarded by Canadians as discriminatory against their country.

Officials at Ottawa persistently refused to submit the treaty to Parliament until action had been taken by the Senate. There may be some disappointment in Canada over the outcome, but there will also be a feeling of relief that the United States Senate took responsibility for defeating a measure with deficiencies which were obvious from both sides of the border.

Mounting Farm Prices.

Dr. Frederic C. Howe, consumers' counsel of the AAA, reports that "prices received by farmers have been climbing since last December," with the upward movement especially pronounced in the first part of February.

There has been much discussion of the necessity of raising the general price level. Less attention has been focused on the fact that the major objective of the price raising campaign is to effect a more equitable balance between the prices of farm and other products. A general advance in the prices of all commodities would not correct this disparity, but might even exaggerate it. For that reason, the possibility of an inflationary price rise brought about by monetary manipulation has been viewed with apprehension by the Department of Agriculture and the AAA.

There is no question that during the past year the spread between the prices of goods which the farmer sells and the prices of goods which he buys has been greatly narrowed. According to Dr. Howe's estimates, farm prices advanced 45 per cent between February, 1933, and February, 1934, while the cost of getting goods from farmers to consumers increased only 10 per cent. In other words, the farmer is getting most of the benefit of the price increases, and not at the housewife's expense. Besides additions to income due to higher sales prices of agricultural products, payment of benefits by the AAA have also helped the farmers.

The permanency of the improvement in the status of agriculture depends in part upon the outcome of production-control experiments and in part on the extent and stability of the recent industrial pick-up, which has enlarged the market for farm produce. Whatever the causes of the betterment, it should help to still rural demands for monetary inflation as a fancied panacea to correct unbalance in the state of the national income.

An Ideal Party Worker.

The political wind, blowing in one direction recently, appears to have veered at least temporarily to another quarter. Seven members of the Democratic National committee, confronted with the terms of the new codex politico, elected to retain the perquisites and give up their nonpaying party jobs. Notable among the exceptions is Mrs. Catherine Conner, committeewoman from Kentucky, who resigned her post with the Federal Emergency Relief Administration to continue party work.

Even more refreshing, however, is the case of Maj. John S. Cohen, able publisher of the Atlanta Journal. A strong believer in the party system, he has been a worker in the Democratic vineyard for years. He is National committeeman from Georgia, but he seeks little, apparently, beyond the opportunity to serve the party by keeping his State organization intact. He did serve a short appointive term as senator, but did not seek election.

Rumor has it that he might have been Secretary of the Navy. Truth has it that he might have been Ambassador to any one of a number of major countries. Legend has it that his good friend, the President, gave him pretty much a choice of jobs, excluding a few. The old copy book story of the job seeking the man was exemplified again when Postmaster General Farley (not yet under the code) "begged" him to take the post of party treasurer. Under the circumstances it was not a difficult job. Nothing but success in lifting the deficit appears to be ahead. The major was given an opportunity to enhance his national prestige, and declined it with thanks.

What sort of man is it who is willing to do the work and ask no fruits? Maj. Cohen is apparently that sort of man. And more of them are needed—more men with interest in party success, and less in spoils therefrom—if our form of government is to surmount the responsibilities of the times.

Liquor And The Schools.

The District Alcohol Beverage Control Board has enhanced its prestige by refusing to grant licenses to liquor dispensing establishments in the close vicinity of schools. Broad discretionary powers were given to the board for the purpose of keeping the liquor traffic within proper bounds. It could not use those powers more reasonably than by forbidding the sale of intoxicants where they are a constant temptation to school children.

It is natural that the authority of the board to make such restrictions should be legally challenged. No doubt the District liquor control act will have to undergo a number of tests in the courts. If it should be found too weak to maintain an appropriate distance between liquor dispensing establishments and schools amendments would be in order. But there is no reason to believe that the board has exceeded its authority legally. It certainly has not done so from the moral viewpoint.

Several attempts have been made by unscrupulous concerns to reap profits by furnishing liquor to children. The sale of chocolates filled with rum, wine, bourbon or cognac developed throughout the country shortly after repeal was effected. Physicians found that half a dozen pieces of this candy were sufficient to intoxicate a child. According to the Educational Press Bureau, a tremendous demand for sweets of this sort has been aroused among children from 8 to 14 years of age.

At least two shipments of liquor chocolates have been seized in Washington, for concoctions of this kind are forbidden by the food and drug act, in spite of repeal. A widespread campaign against these illegal sweets is being conducted by the Government.

In Washington, as in other cities, it has also been found necessary to forbid the sale of miniature bottles of liquor, which have a particular attraction for uncontrolled children. One of the most important functions of control boards is to establish effective barriers between childhood and intoxicants. To a considerable extent the success of the District board will be measured by its achievements in this respect.

Looking Up.

Like sunshine after cold gray days, a ray of humor has broken through the stolid atmosphere of Chicago's Union League Club. Its dining room overlooking LaSalle street—the financial district—is to be embellished by worthless stocks and bonds once valued at $1,000,000. As erstwhile millionaires assemble to dine under the spell of these gold-engraved certificates they will reflect upon the follies of 1929, relying upon the consequent mirth to stimulate digestion.

To laugh at the failings of some one else is a common trait, but to deduce humor from one's own blunders denotes a rather unique cultivation of intellect. Before an individual plasters the evidence of his folly on the walls of a dining room he may be expected to indulge in a good deal of soul searching. There is a strong possibility that priggishness, arrogance or cocksureness may be cast aside along with useless ornate certificates that once represented wealth and prestige.

Does the "million dollar dining room" mean, then, that the Union League has broken through the crust of smug self-sufficiency? It is a question worthy the attention of alert Democrats. For once a sense of humor begins to leaven the self-righteousness of a political party, it becomes dynamic and therefore effective. That is the lesson American Socialism has never learned.

A Texas town recently observed "mothers-in-law day." A laudable thing to do, we say; for as far as we're able to ascertain, there never was a mother-in-law who wasn't also a mother.

Slaughter of Innocents.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am glad your paper has made this calamity of the death of four additional Army pilots of paramount importance by giving it front page notice. Too much can not be said against this wholesale slaughter of the innocents. Why the air mail anyway? Can not the radio, telephone, wireless and railroads (crying for service) carry the news fast enough?

Has any enterprise (other than war) in the history of the world demanded such sacrifice? Can the purchase of millions of 15-cent air mail stamps pay for a single life?

It is my earnest prayer that Congress and the President will see the immediate need of drastic action tending toward the alleviation of this sinful crime.

MRS. JOHN K. HILLERS.

Answering Mr. Curran.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We feel that the statement made by the publicity director of the National Economy League, Mr. Henry H. Curran, should not go unanswered.

His statement that the Veterans of Foreign Wars represent only an insignificant percentage of veterans of the World War, is partially correct. We are well aware of the fact that quite a few of these veterans do not belong to any organization whatsoever. However, we feel we are making a very conservative statement when we say we are expressing the views of at least 80 per cent of the World War veterans insofar as our stand on the bonus bill is concerned.

This percentage represented by the National Economy League is so small that it would be unheard of if it were not for the fact that a big majority are millionaires and retired Army or Navy officers. These retired gentlemen enjoy a nice income from the Government in the form of retirement pay. The economy act did not hurt them a whole lot as it only reduced their retirement pay 15 per cent.

Interpreting NRA Codes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In connection with the NRA and the Blue Eagle—I have also heard of this argument:

"How can an employer, carrying his quota of employes as required by his business, paying them standard wages, making a reasonable profit for himself—a profit that would justify his staying in business—shorten his employes' hours, take on additional help and increase their wages?"

Let me explain what I believe is the Administration's attitude and intention in the matter.

Cases of this kind represent the smaller businesses and are on the borderline. It is my opinion that employers who are doing all they possibly can in order to conform to their respective codes, have met all requirements asked of them by the Administration. It is not to these employers that the Administration makes its present appeal for cooperation in its program for shorter hours and higher wages.

But the Administration does appeal to those employers who own or control large corporations and business houses, to be satisfied with a more reasonable profit at the end of the year and to put to work the difference between a reasonable profit and one beyond all reason, to the hiring of additional personnel, the shortening of working hours and the increase in wages. The Administration is justified in this demand. FRED J. CALVERT.

Jewish History and Nazism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Without assuming to inject myself into the differences between a Howard University professor and Mr. Lowe, concerning the effect of Nazi and similar movements on the interpretation of Jewish history, as one who would frown on anti-Semitism, let me say: Anti-Semitism will be strangled quicker by all sides conceding the truth than by becoming supersensitive when an attempt is made to get at the facts.

No one thinks of blaming the descendants of the Puritans because their ancestors hanged witches. But it these same descendants denied the historical fact, then they would court censure. Joshua's so-called "conquest of Palestine" was as unprovoked as it was murderous. But to excuse it, as Mr. Lowe implies by saying that the Canaanites were worshipers of Moloch, would open the way for religious persecution today.

A further fact should be conceded by Jews if we are to smash anti-Semitism. That fact is that Christians took the sacred writings of the Jews, incorporated them into their Bible, preached them as "inspired of God," and even on equal footing with the New Testament. This not only scattered the Old Testament throughout the world as part of the Christian's sacred writings, but glorified the Jew as God's favored people through whom supposedly came the Christian Scriptures. If the Jew stresses what the Christian owes to him, he must also concede what he owes to the Christian. J. O. KNOTT.

Men Vs. Machine.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am in hearty sympathy with what the New Deal is attempting to do, but it appears to me that the big problem to meet is man power versus machine power. During the last few months enough labor-saving machinery has been put into Government service here in Washington to take the place of several hundred office workers. Within the last few years, conservatively speaking, enough machinery has been installed to take the place of 10,000 men and women Government clerks.

I have noticed the same result in street paving, building operations, printing plants and in manufacturing industries where skilled labor is used. Even common labor is being superseded by machinery. The farmer used many times more pieces of machinery than he did in 1900; hence much less man power.

Hours must be shortened or less machinery used. The former is by far more sensible. Leisure is not lost. We spend money in what might be called the pursuits of leisure about equal to what we spend for necessities—from books to lip rouge and baseball, not leaving out automobiles used in seeing America first—which also means more spending. Thus more leisure creates more necessities which must be supplied. This is not a vicious circle, but a benign one, in which all profit—banker, merchant, hotel keeper, factory owner, &c.

Life is short at its best. No one can take his money to the grave. One can eat only so much, wear only so many clothes at a time. But it is possible to enjoy leisure while here—if leisure is to be had.

HENRY GREENLEAF OWEN.

Uneconomical Economy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Senatorial move to restore to Spanish-American War veterans their service-connection may well suggest how uneconomically a professedly "economy" program gets handled in our political mill. The initial zeal of the budgeteers was so obviously overdone that Congress was compelled to waste its time in curtailing that zeal.

Thus practically all the work of the elaborate and costly system of boards, set up for the purpose of investigating pension claims and costing us more than $4,000 per day, is about to be thrown into the discard! Rightly so, too.

For the Spanish-American War veterans (including those of the Philippines and China) to produce proofs, outside of their discharge records of what had happened 33 years ago was practically impossible. The War Office possess the official records of such claimants and the elementary rule that field-service justified service-connection would have vastly simplified the final settlement. It would also have eliminated much bureaucratic expense as well as much unnecessary and uneconomical impoverishment of good men.

Good Samaritans.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: I should like to register my opinion, based on adequate experience (i. e., seven years' driving aged and infirm cars) that the human race, including taxi drivers, is as richly endowed with kindness as ever it was.

Only recently in backing out of the sea of mud at Sycamore, I missed Conduit road rather badly in the fog and intense darkness and very nearly landed in the ditch on the other side. Clinging precariously on the edge of something and quite unable to risk releasing my brakes for the plunge back to the road, I became the fit subject for a rapid-fire display of pure goodness. A whistling youth emerging from the darkness, a boy in a muddy old car, a taxi driver with a big, strong rope and a brisk command of the situation—voila! I was reestablished on the road and away went my band of rescuers, the boy who did the hauling never stopping to receive my thanks, the taxi driver detaching his cable and saying "bless your heart, I get stuck sometimes myself." Don't tell me there isn't adventure on the broad highway! CARILLON.

As Others Saw It.

Two thousand commuters can't be wrong!

San Francisco Bay has a sea serpent. Maybe it's Amy from Victoria, or the strange monster that was sighted off Point Reyes less than a week ago, or a sister of the Loch Ness nightmare.

At any rate, a strange denizen of the deep, variously described as from 15 to 35 feet long and with a head and mane like a giant horse, all but threw the passengers on the Southern Pacific ferryboat Berkeley into hysteria.

It happened on the 5:45 p. m. trip to Alameda.

Carrington Bowles, 621 Central avenue, Alameda, was one of the first to notice the "thing" and in 30 seconds by Capt. Samuel Forsberg's official timepiece, the entire passenger list of the boat, plus deck hands and officers, had flocked to the starboard side of the boat as it passed within 100 feet of the whatis-it.

"We were almost close enough to pat it," said Bowles. "It moved alongside the boat for a way. It had quite a long neck and a big head and mane. I hadn't had a thing to drink."

The bay monster didn't show his tail. But from all accounts he did shake a wicked mane and appeared to weigh several tons.

The Post Impressionist

Postoffice, Thursday.

Now, in contradistinction to the Business Revival, book publishers inform this Column of a heavy production-decrease in the detective novel industry. Next summer will show a steadily declining curve in mysterious cadavers and a sharp fall in sleuths.

Bad news for the promenade deck. Sad news for the Pullman patron. Mad news for that stranger within our gates condemned now to mope out his hotel-room evenings because he won't, alas, glance at the gift of the Gideons.

Yet a love for riddles is inherent in humanity; inherent in humanity, too, is interest—aloof and academic interest—in crime. The other Roosevelt always sandwiched a slice of red-meat mystery between slices of his rye-bread reading; it was the one thing he had in common with Woodrow Wilson. Whenever Lord Balfour took home a pile of parliamentary memoranda, he added an equal weight of detective stories. The publishers' present predicament must be due to the low average of recent workmanship, which has been abysmal—assiduous puffing notwithstanding.

* * * *

Indeed, like action and reaction in physics, flattery and merit are opposite and equal. Routine blurbs and the more-friendly-than-wise praise of fellow craftsmen seem in inverse ratio to their faith. Take the current "Thin Man." (No, we do not mean the synchronous "Skin and Bones.") "The Thin Man" was fanfared as "the best detective story yet."

"Yet" Stevenson and Osborne's "Wrong Box," Wilkie Collins' "Moonstone" and "The Woman in White" with its bird-loving Fosco, first fat-man villain in this genre! "Yet" sundry works by one Charles Dickens! "Yet" . . .

* * * *

"The Thin Man" struck us as a trick piece of writing about dull people loosely connected with an uninteresting felony. "Loosely" and "connected" are the right words. The story was flattened by the logs rolled over it, but it had been almost level to begin with.

* * * *

Because so different from "The Thin Man," the well-nigh unspoofed, yet sometimes sophomoronically smart, "Slow Death at Geneva" clarifies this criticism.

The former novel is exact in all its data, the latter is as full of what statisticians call "factual errors" as any racketeer's income-tax return. But, whereas "The Thin Man's" precision distracts attention from his plot, you don't care a bit when "Slow Death" finds "little islands" in the Helvetian Rhone, mosquito-nets in Swiss bedchambers, and can not find poison ivy anywhere in the Genevese Canton.

Minor matters? But, above detail, "The Thin Man's" whole plan is realistic, "Slow Death" hilariously detours realism.

Now, to our modest mind, realism is mystery's natural enemy. If we know aught about the obviousness of actual crime, one of the best tests of crime-fiction deals with its ability to convince you through an avoidance of realism. You don't believe "The Thin Man" because he is too much a police reality for police fiction; but, while you know that "Slow Death" couldn't happen, you know that it did happen, and you desperately refuse to put it down until you discover how it came about.

* * * *

Ourselves, being traditionalists, enjoy the detective story that starts with the butler's finding of Sir Jasper's body. It lies in his library between his Louis XV desk (secret drawer open) and the unlocked French window which gives upon an ancestral lawn extending to the spinney.

We feel, moreover, that, despite Wilkie Collins, mere robbery won't suffice. There should be a first-degree murder, obviously not committed for sordid gold. And, when the murderer or murderess is surprisingly revealed (no earlier than two pages from the last), he or she—but preferably she, as in A. E. W. Mason's "House of the Arrow"—should not spoil everything, like "Lady Audley," by being insane, and should not, like so many other fiction-assassins, cheat justice by suicide.

We prefer, next, that the author should exercise a strict economy in his killings. More than one in one book is just too much; too many corpses spoil the broth.

Lastly, as already indicated, we do not care for the ordinary plain clothes-man as the riddle's solver. We prefer Dr. Thorndyke in his most pompous mood to Smith of Mulberry street, or Brown of Scotland Yard, in his most chastened manner. Philo Vance may often be too artificially romantic—frequently, Van Dine's cheek positively puffs with the tongue that is in it—but Brown and Smith are always unromantic, and your sound detective story should be ever of the essence of romance. We want the strong uncommunicative outsider, with marked peculiarities, the Dupin, the Sherlock, the after all merely semiofficial Reggie Fortune, pitted against a stupid constabulary—and sure astoundingly to win.

* * * *

However, that's personal. What, in the interests of their own revenues, the publishers should insist upon is thoroughly suspended mystery—like H. C. Bailey's best—worked out among interesting characters—like most of Agatha Christie's—and, while playing fair with the reader, told in as good a style as that of Mrs. Belloc Lowndes, who gives you the authentic spinal shiver by writing as if she were a pleasant middle-aged friend sitting at your table and bringing you some awful news of other friends:

"You know, the most dreadful thing happened at their house yesterday . . . . ."

For the detective story is a literary form as fixed as the Ballade, Chant-Royal, or Villanelle.

THE Republicans have the Democrats so much on the run in the matter of the air-mail debacle that about all the latter seem to be able to say now is that while it may have been a mistake, some good, some progress will come out of it. The Democratic tone appears to have dropped to that.

BARGERON.

"You just watch and see now, something good is coming from this. We don't know yet exactly what it is; our plans have not definitely shaped up. But just bear with us and quit shouting in our ears. We can't think with the Republican noise all over the place. We are proceeding by the trial and error system, you know."

• • • •

Their attitude rather recalls the heroic gesture of Secretary of the Interior Wilbur at the height of the Republicans' panic over the depression. Nothing they tried seemed to click. They were getting about as desperate as the people out of work. After their German moratorium had failed to improve things, spirits were at pretty low ebb.

It was just about this time, I think, that the Interior Secretary—and by the way he was a professor—decided to try a new tack. In a speech at Philadelphia he announced quite solemnly that the depression had done a lot of good, that for one thing it had tended to reestablish the family unit and child health had shown a considerable improvement. The parents, he said, were giving their children more attention since they didn't have employment to distract them.

Boy, what a howl that utterance got! The rapidly increasing army of unemployed joined in one long, loud derisive scream and we malcontents of the newspaper profession dipped our pens heavily in vitriol. It was about the silliest thing, up until that time, I had ever heard a man in high office say.

I recall, too, the similar arguments that were made during the war. As a matter of fact, the propagandists finally sold the country on the idea that war, instead of being devastating, was really helpful, a vehicle of progress. It brought out the best in men, it exacted the highest from our inventive geniuses, it was a great cleansing thing, that is what it was. I'll say it was cleansing. We haven't been able to get the soap out of our eyes and ears yet.

One of its greatest purported accomplishments, I believe, was that it brought mankind closer together, it killed the selfishness in men, caused them to think better of their lowly fellows. It just united us into one lovable fraternity, that is what war did.

• • • •

In favor of the Democrats' contention, however, is the fact that had not a lot of our ancestors been massacred by the Indians this great land of ours would never have been hewn from the forest. Hot dog! I hadn't looked at it in that light before. There maybe, after all, something to what the Democrats say.

But, in fairness to the Republicans, the only thing that so far appears to be arising from the air-mail debacle is Gen. Billy Mitchell. There is discussion of coordinating the air services under one head, with the general at the top.

And frankly, I don't believe this would be sufficient progress to justify all of the "planned economy" that must have gone into the air-mail mess. Indeed, I can't see how in a planned and charted state the general's resurrection can be looked upon as any progress at all. It is not, either, that I am lacking in appreciation of the general's virtues.

The point is that he has had his fling at the front pages. To revive him, to my mind, would be more along the line of "going back to the old order" than of going ahead, which is what progress is.

It would be more progressive if we would have another governmental bureau, and another bureau is always progress for Washington, that we should place over it some new up and coming hell-raiser, not go back to a Virginia estate retirement to find one.

Ham's Sin Was Looking When Father Wasn't Dressed

By Robert Quillen.

A certain lady has brought suit against a photographer who displayed her portrait in his show window.

Whatever the merit of her case may be, she has the understanding sympathy of thousands who have been shamed and humiliated in the same way.

It is high time for the courts to determine whether innocent citizens have any protection from cameras.

It is clear that a citizen of a free country belongs to himself. His person is private property, and no one has the right to take liberties with it except with his permission.

Snap judgment might decide that a photograph can not be defamatory or libelous, since it portrays the truth.

But a photograph in which the victim is caught off guard, like a libelous statement in print, may tell no untruth, and yet be untrue because it reveals but a small portion of the truth and presents it as the whole.

To say in print that John Doe neglects his wife may be a libelous untruth even though it is true. He may on rare occasions neglect her, while his normal and usual conduct is the perfection of tender solicitude.

So a photograph may reveal the subject exactly as he appeared at the moment and yet despoil him of his dignity and customary poise and make him seem an awkward and ridiculous imbecile.

No person, high or low, maintains at all times a pose that does him credit. Even when he seems most impressive to the eye the camera may catch him in a momentary position that is ridiculous and shameful.

The "frank camera" has been especially offensive in portraying Mrs. Roosevelt.

She is a lady whose qualities of heart and mind would entitle her to every respect and courtesy if she were not the President's wife.

Yet cameramen with more zeal than taste have repeatedly and deliberately caught her off guard and humiliated her before the Nation.

Decent people resent that sort of thing. They believe, and rightly that a libelous picture is no less defamatory than libelous words.

The Once Over

IDEA FOR AN INCOME TAX RETURN.

U. S. Treasury Dept.,
Washington, D. C.
Gents:

The inclosed form, on which I am asked to make a record of my income for last year, is returned to you with my kind respects and my deepest appreciation of this subtle form of flattery. I was particularly impressed by its resurrection of old forms and figures of English speech such as "compensation from outside sources," "net profit received," "income from rents," "interest on bank deposits," &c.

• • • •

One question I got a great laugh out of was: "Were you during the taxable year supporting in your household one or more persons closely related to you?" Boy, that's a honey!

• • • •

Say, Mister Secretary, you would be surprised. There are so many persons closely related to me staying over at my house that I am what you would call surrounded. Only the other day three more distant cousins of my wife blew in, making a new high for the movement. And one of them brought a friend.

• • • •

For the last four years my house has been full of strangers, all claiming to be my cousins or aunts or something of myself or my wife. I can't identify half of them, and what burned me up was when my wife's Uncle Jerry, who has been living with us a year, slapped me on the back the other day and asked, "Haven't I seen you some place before?"

• • • •

The blank says it will allow me $400 for each dependent relative and I would say the Government is overpricing them, as I would trade the entire lot for $11 and throw in a pair of bicycle pants and a magic lantern. (Two of my wife's aunts you can have for the asking.)

• • • •

Heigh-ho and alackaday! The blank also asks me to "describe your business as provided in item II" and I am glad to answer. It's terrible, Mister Secretary. And it asks me to "enter on line I of schedule A my total receipts for 1933." I wish you would stop joking, Mister Secretary. Fun is fun, but enough is enough and you can carry anything too far.

• • • •

And you ask me to "enter on line 13 losses incurred during the taxable year." I think this is an error. You must mean enter on 13 lines, not on line 13.

• • • •

Then you say something about allowances for "obsolescence, depletion and depreciation." That's where I come in. As an American business man, I am a study in obsolescence. I am depleted, deflated, depressed, denatured, denounced, deranged and dejected. I am despondent, despairing, denuded, debunked and dehydrated. And so is my old man.

• • • •

Trusting that this reply will meet all requirements under the income tax and that the great work of taxing, mulcting, sandbagging, soaking, socking and dry cleaning the American public may go merrily forward, I am, yours in a barrel,

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

I never before rightly understood why "Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers." It was not a matter, I admit, which had sent me thumbing through encyclopedias. But now that I've found out, I'm glad to fill in one chink with which my mind is riddled.

Peter picked the peppers to make salt pork tastier. He was not going on a sea voyage; he was just an ordinary English farmer, of anywhere from the thirteenth to eighteenth century, preparing for the winter. During 500 years hay was the only food for pigs and cattle. Every winter the supply ran low, and some of the beasts had to be killed and salted down. Peppers were one way to make the inevitable salt meat less monotonous.

Then something happened—one of those small and homely incidents which change the course of nations far more than do battles and treaties. A Suffolk farmer, about 1724, began to feed his sheep with turnips. Turnips could be grown easily; turnips could be stored all winter. That was the end of the forced salting-down.

Turnip fodder and turnspits, seed drills and plows, spinning jennies and water closets—these and a hundred other objects, in their invention and evolution, make us what we are today. They are all described in one of the most fascinating books I've seen in some time: Volume 3 of "A History of Everyday Things in England: The Rise of Industrialism: 1733-1851" (Scribner, $2.50).

Marjorie and C. H. B. Quennell looked through old letters and diaries, studied old books and took their sketch pads through museums and put together this account of man's food, clothing and homes. Their first two volumes had brought the story down from 1066; their fourth will bring it to date. But out of this long span, the century described in the present book is quite the most important. For it was the turning point, the Industrial Revolution.

Before Jethro Tull took ideas from a pipe-organ, wheel-barrow, and cider-mill, and made the first seed-drill (described in his book: "The Horse-Hoeing Husbandry," 1733), there was only sowing by hand in the Biblical way. Before James Hargreaves saw his wife's spinning wheel fall flat on the floor, still spinning, and wondered why a device wouldn't work that way and with more than one thread at a time, there had been no change in thread-making since the 1500's. The notion came to Hargreaves about 1750; in 1770 he patented the "Jenny," named after his wife, and a whole industry was made over. Between the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries there occurred a greater gap, looking at life in its mechanical aspects, than at any time before or since.

Some of the material of the book is familiar enough. But most of it, unless you have been an assiduous antiquarian, is new and novel territory. There are hundreds of illustrations, many of them charmingly drawn by the Quennells themselves. The pavilion at Bath, the shops in Regent street, ice-houses, women's fashions, the first dole in 1795, slums and factory towns, Bramah's watercloset of 1778, Newgate prison, the first omnibus of 1829—here is an astonishing range in picture and text.

Oddly, the book was aimed at children. But aside from a few didactic remarks, this will not bother you at all. You will find it hugely and constantly interesting to learn of the origin of our commonplace devices.

"The Mystery of the Cape Cod Tavern," by Phoebe Atwood Taylor. (Norton, $2.) Asey Mayo, a twanging Yankee, solves the crime in a Joseph Lincoln setting. Pretty ingenious, but there's just too much local color.

"Cappy Ricks Comes Back," by Peter B. Kyne. (Kinsey, $2.) Cappy is not easier to lay away on the shelf than was Sherlock Holmes. In Mr. Kyne's twenty-fourth book he reappears as canny, kindly and hot-tempered as ever. I wish him life for two dozen more.

"The Perfect Pair," by Lois Montross. (Doubleday-Doran, $2.) What happens to the young couple voted "the perfect pair" on graduation? They may become engaged, and classmates may "oh" and "ah." But nothing is so vulnerable as perfection. Mrs. Montross, of College Humor and the women's magazines, turns out a frothy and often amusing tale.

"The Portcullis Room," by Valentine Williams. (Houghton-Mifflin, $2.) A castle in the Hebrides, an American millionaire, a ghost, an ancient feud, and a murder, all assembled with first-rate suspense and action. "The Fighting Danites," by Dane Coolidge. (Dutton, $2.) The Danites were a robber clan in south Utah when Utah was the Mormon empire of Deseret.

Young Lieut. Tarrant, U. S. Dragoons, was sent to clean them out, and did, with restored honor, renown and romance into the bargain. Mr. Coolidge has told any number of excellent yarns of the West—this one is especially exciting.

"Marriage for Revenue," by George Agnew Chamberlain. (Bobbs-Merrill, $2.) "Death Rides the Mesa," by Tom Gill. (Farrar & Rinehart, $2.) The mysterious black-hooded rider casts a chill over the stretches of northern Mexico. Spanish ranchers, old Axtec temples, and an archeologist give this combination "Western mystery" an odd flavor. It should keep you on pins and needles.

Darrow NRA Board Starts Action Today

No "Trust Buster," Says Noted Lawyer of New Study.

The Review Advisory Board, which was set up after Senatorial complaints that the NRA was permitting monopolistic oppression of small business men, starts doing business today with an open hearing on the electrical code at the Willard Hotel.

Within a week the board, under the chairmanship of Clarence Darrow, will look into questions of alleged oppression in the lumber, rubber, and dress and hat industries. It has also received charges of an aluminum monopoly.

"Is this going to be a trust-busting board?" Darrow was asked yesterday.

"We're not going to do anything we don't have to," answered the chairman with a smile. "We'll just let the complaints come in."

Complaints Roll In.

One function which the board has already assumed is that of a reservoir for Congressional woes. Most of the 800 complaints already received, Darrow said, members of Congress acting on behalf of their constituents. NRA officials privately expressed relief at this development, for one of their chief difficulties has come from the pleading of Senators and Representatives.

It was recently brought out that Representative Fulmer, of South Carolina, had advised a constituent, who had complained against paying high code wages, to go ahead and do business in the usual way.

The possibility that small business is being squeezed as much by the high cost of NRA labor as by the monopolistic practices of "big fellows" was admitted by Darrow. A "considerable number" of complaints received, he said, referred to the "impossibility of some operators paying the wages under the code."

Wage Cuts Unlikely.

"Is it possible that your board would recommend lower wages in certain codes?" he was asked.

"It's possible, but not very likely," answered the chairman.

The board, he said, would be a court of review, with its five members reporting directly to the President. It will have no regional subsidiaries and will endeavor to do business with as little red tape as possible. It may employ its own investigators, though no such action is contemplated immediately.

Darrow was asked to comment on a recent speech he made at Mecca Temple, in New York City, in which he declared that he didn't think the NRA "could get very far."

"Did I say that?" asked the elderly lawyer with a grin. "I was talking about religion. I don't remember saying that at all."

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

Julius Caesar.

Socrates, Plato, Thucydides, Euripides, Aristophanes, Aristotle, Lucretius must have been interesting men to know intimately, to meet at dinner, to have for company on long walks; they were men of letters. But I think in all the centuries before Christ the most interesting man of action was Julius Caesar. He did not profess to be a literary man; and he would have been astonished if some one had told him that 20 centuries after his death his books would be read by thousands of American schoolboys. I remember when we read Caesar and Cicero at school how much more respect I had for Caesar. Cicero's orations were self-conscious and pompous; Caesar's language seemed more definite, more to the point. "How long, O Catiline, wilt thou abuse our patience?" I did not know how long; but I felt sure it was not so long as Cicero's. I had a suspicion that it might have been more interesting to hear what Catiline thought of Cicero than vice versa. When Caesar began the story of his successful exploits in Gaul he began by telling us not about himself, but about the country. I know of no better beginning of a narrative than the first sentence of the Commentaries: "All Gaul is divided into three parts." Seven words in the original Latin as in the translation; definite and essential information in seven words.

The first play by Shakespeare that I read was "Julius Caesar." It is impossible to state with assurance just what Shakespeare himself thought of the great Roman; but his spirit dominates the play. "The foremost man of all this world" is what Brutus called him after the assassination. "O Julius Caesar, thou art mighty yet!" You can not get rid of a great man by killing him. No historian has ever more accurately shown the difference between the characters of Brutus and Cassius than Shakespeare, the playwright. Brutus was a Mugwump, a sincere political reformer, who lacked common sense and who was pathetically ignorant of human nature; Cassius was a professional politician, who needed the honorable name of Brutus to give respectability to the conspiracy. Between them they succeeded in killing the most useful man in the world. He was murdered March 15, B. C. 44.

One should reread in the play the conversation between Antony, Brutus and Cassius after the murder. Cassius did not want Antony to speak; he knew the mob. Antony would be safer as a corpse. But when Brutus insisted, it is laughable to see the difference in the inducements held out to him by Brutus and by Cassius. Brutus appealed to his intelligence; he might as well have appealed to the intelligence of a dynamo. Cassius promised him an equal share in the spoils. Reading the lines, one can see as if one had been present the look that passed between Antony and Cassius at that moment.

Brutus was, as Antony remarked, an honorable man; but history deals with the effects and not the motives of action. Caesar's last words, "Et Tu, Brute?" are second only to the kiss of Judas Iscariot.

Preview of "Let's Fall in Love" Reveals Two Young Actresses of Rare Charm

Story Relates Trials of the Movie Makers

Gregory Ratoff Hits Again; Two Celebrated Visitors; About Showshops.

By Nelson B. Bell.

There is rather more than a touch of "Once in a Lifetime" in "Let's Fall in Love," a picture that has been knocking at the door of Washington for some time now, first an imminent booking at one theater, then at another.

There is also in it a new leading woman who seems destined to make considerable name for herself, in the person of Ann Sothern. In fact Miss Sothern has already made considerable name for herself in the theater, her present being the third nom de theatre she has adopted to my personal knowledge!

Then there is Eddie Lowe—Edmund, if you feel as formal as that about it—doing what he has frequently done in the actual business of making pictures, appearing as a director who manufactures a new star out of a sideshow girl on a circus lot.

It would not be going too far, I think, to suggest that there is also in "Let's Fall in Love" no little raillery aimed at Greta Garbo. This is none of Miss Sothern's doing. But before Miss Sothern comes on the scene, Tira Birell appears as a temperamental star who "does a Garbo," if ever I saw one. She even thinks she'll go home now! By all the legend of the studios, nothing could be more Garbo than that!

The Budding Birell.

The biggest surprise disclosed by the picture, at yesterday noon's preview for the press in the private projection room in the Earle Theater Building, was the amazing effectiveness of Miss Birell in the comparatively small part alloted her in the drama's early action. Miss Birell, you will recall, was heralded by Universal as one of the "finds of the year" not so long ago, when she was introduced to American audiences in a frigid war-time episode set high in the snow-capped Alps and bearing the title of "The Doomed Battalion," released, if memory serves—and sometimes it does—in June, 1932.

In this pictorially magnificent panorama of some of the most rugged and most beautiful of the Alpine scenery ever to find its way to the American screen, Miss Birell was cast opposite Victor Varconi and great things were promised for her future. Most of them failed utterly ever to develop. But now it begins to look as if there might have been some foundation in fact for all of Universal's earlier enthusiasm over the brilliant potentialities of this blonde young woman. In "Let's Fall in Love" she certainly "shows something," as the saying goes.

Ratoff Commits Theft!

The picture, however, is largely pilfered from the rest, by that reliable and intensely amusing dialectician, Gregory Ratoff, who reenacts what amounts to a carbon copy of his role of Herman Glogauer, the great producer in "Once in a Lifetime"—the film version, that would be. Mr. Ratoff is by all odds the funniest thing in the picture.

By now everyone must be familiar with the popular song that is the theme number of this production and bears the same title. It is sung in the film by Arthur Jarrett, whose duties about end there.

The material investiture with which the film is embellished leaves little to be desired in the way of completeness and ornate effect and the cast acquits itself well in a story that is not always quite as sprightly as it might be. It is just barely possible that there may be a little too much stress laid upon the plot value of a producer's and a director's dilemma in getting an important film finally before the cameras.

Miss Sothern and Miss Birell, however, will be found pretty nearly worth the whole price of admission whether the others—excepting, of course, Mr. Ratoff—show anything much, or not.

Among the welcome, but infrequent, visitors to the Capital, at the moment, is Ben H. Atwell, one of the veteran oracles of the playhouse whose interests usually are dedicated to the promotion of the living theater, but who, for the time being, is devoting his spacious talents to the cinema in a connection that eventually, one suspects, will assert itself in connection with the Metropolitan Theater. Encountered unexpectedly in the teakwood and velour suite occupied officially by Manager Hardie Meakin of RKO-Keith's, Mr. Atwell revived many cordial memories of brothers in the faith during a brief visit late yesterday afternoon. More will be heard of this prodigious gentleman later, unless one misses one's guess. Mr. Atwell is always worth hearing more of later.

Tagging Mr. Tiller.

Definitely putting at rest rumors that have been floating about for several weeks now concerning the ultimate disposition of the piece, comes word that the widely discussed and slightly controversial second prize-winner in the recent one-act play tournament of the District, Theodore Tiller, jr., "Trio of Triangles," will be presented, in condensed form, as a special added attraction at Loew's Fox Theater tomorrow afternoon, Thursday, March 15, at 5:50 o'clock.

In a "Trio of Triangles," the junior Tiller has taken a single plot idea and given it three separate and distinct treatments, after the respective manners of Sir James M. Barrie, Noel Coward and Eugene O'Neill. He has done an exceptionally clever job of writing and acts the lead in each version of his domestic dramalet with commendable skill. It is in this skit also that Romaine Stevens acquits herself with such outstanding credit.

Having been the bone of so much friendly contention, a "Trio of Triangles" should prove a valuable addition to a bill that is headed by Ann Harding and an excellent cast in "Gallant Lady," and Benny Meroff and his orchestra, as headliners of the vaudeville bill.

Today at 11 a. m., Mr. John Lodge, leading man with Marlene Dietrich in the Josef Von Sternberg production of "The Scarlet Empress"—another version of the story of "Catherine the Great," in which Elizabeth Bergner and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., eventually will be seen at RKO-Keith's, provided Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert ever run down in "It Happened One Night"—will receive the press for a brief conference.

Mr. Lodge is the house guest of Mrs. Clarence Williams, 3033 N street, on a brief visit to the Capital prior to the release of a picture that has created unusual curiosity with regard to the degree to which it may parallel the story in which Frau Bergner and the junior Fairbanks appear to such advantage.

In the American-made Paramount release—"Catherine the Great" was made in Great Britain by Alexander Korda, responsible also for "The Private Life of Henry VIII"—Mr. Lodge plays the role of the young lover with whom Catherine, played by Miss Dietrich, has the affair that finally incurs the enmity of the dowager Elizabeth.

Joins Ranks of Professionals

One of the most brilliant pianistes resident in the National Capital, Miss Evelyn Tyner, a native of Indiana, is this week making her professional stage debut in association with Henry Nestor, Washington's "singing cop." Both are well known locally and are making constant progress toward a definite virtuosity that should carry them far on the stage. Miss Tyner possesses a technique that is unique and an interpretative sense that adds tremendously to the effectiveness of her colorful renditions.

Disney Associates Declare Mickey Has Become Commercialized.

Disney's associates declare Mickey, Minnie and the rest probably have their likenesses on more articles than all the rest of Hollywood's notables placed end to end.

The animated cartoon characters have been painted, sewn, stamped and impressed on everything imaginable—from a bar of soap to underwear and babies' silver mugs.

Fifty-one manufacturers are marketing articles bearing the likeness of Mickey and his family, while 52 are making items carrying paintings, drawings or impressions of Disney's three little pigs and big bad wolf.

For Sale or Rent.

A 15-minute period on the radio this morning at 10—or will take airplane trip to Miami Beach in exchange and won't ask where you got it!

More About Mickey.

Mickey Mouse, insofar as his money making ability as an actor is concerned, is a dud. So, too, are the three little pigs, the big bad wolf, Horace Horsecollar, Minnie Mouse and the rest of them.

That from no less an authority than the 32-year-old creator of the animated cartoon characters—Walt Disney.

"I've heard estimates," says Disney in his quiet manner, "from outsiders, of course, placing the gross from the Three Little Pigs as high as $3,000,000 to date. Every time I produce another Mickey Mouse or Silly Symphony, I'm accused of making another million dollars.

"I only wish it were true."

Here are the actual figures, quoted from the records of Disney's studio: "Three Little Pigs," probably the most successful short subject ever produced by any studio, from the standpoint of number of theaters booking it, cost Disney $60,000 to make. To date it has grossed about $64,000—a net profit to Disney of $4,000.

Out of the Red.

Disney said theaters pay a nominal rental of only slightly more than $6 per booking for a Mickey Mouse or Silly Symphony.

The creator of these pen and ink characters admitted he could easily trim his overhead considerably. But that isn't his idea of the way to make a better picture next time.

Disney, for instance, maintains a school for animators. He is constantly on the lookout for artists. When he finds one with promise, he hires him, puts him in the school to learn to draw Mickey, Minnie and the rest, as Disney thinks they should be drawn, meanwhile, paying him a salary.

Champion Walker Injured by Auto

Norfolk, Va., March 14 (Spl.).—C. E. Voliva, 54, of Princess Anne County, who gained public notice recently when it was revealed that he walked 30 miles to and from work daily in order to maintain a $6.75-a-week job, was struck by an automobile while crossing the Campostella bridge yesterday. The car was driven by S. M. Butler, 24, of Portlock.

Voliva was removed to St. Vincent's Hospital, where an examination disclosed that he had sustained severe cuts and bruises about the head as well as two fractured ribs.

Page Orchardists Call Peach Loss 73 Per Cent

Luray, Va., March 14 (Spl.).—D. N. Spitler, H. F. Sours, S. K. Sours, T. W. Abbott, Rae T. Koontz and C. L. Finnell, owners of large commercial peach orchards in Page County, say the peach crop has suffered an average loss of 73 per cent due to cold weather in February.

Many buds have been killed in the wood. Some growers announce they will abandon their orchards and devote their lands to strawberries. C. N. Graves, commissioner of the revenue, owner of the largest commercial cherry orchard in Page County, says all cherry buds have been killed.

Roanoke Dairymen Urge Brugh for Commission

Roanoke, Va., March 14 (Spl.).—The Roanoke Cooperative Milk Producers Association has wired Gov. Peery urging appointment of Kone Brugh, of Troutville, secretary of the association, to the newly created State milk commission, and requesting a hearing under provisions of the milk law enacted by the recent session of the General Assembly.

T. J. Andrews, association president, says he believes the law will be beneficial to milk producers all over the State, and especially in sections like the Roanoke area, where there is an oversupply of milk. Two members will be elected to the local control board March 27.

Kite-Flying Boys Told Of Power Line Danger

Fredericksburg, Va., March 14 (Spl.).—Pictorial handbills warning youngsters of the danger of flying kites in the vicinity of electric wires have been distributed by the Virginia Electric & Power Co., through schools of this section.

Ray C. Hopkins, manager of the Fredericksburg District of the power company, emphasized danger of flying kites near the high-power line between here and Richmond.

187 Are Saved As U.S. Gunboat Burns in China

British Destroyer Praised for Heroic Rescue in Treacherous Sea.

Hongkong, China, March 15 (Thursday) (AP).—The 187 men aboard the United States gunboat Fulton when flames enveloped her during a heavy storm were brought safely to this port early today.

Three were injured. One suffered from smoke in the lungs, another had a broken arm, and the third a broken leg. Their names were not announced. The Fulton was on pirate patrol duty.

Their rescue by the British destroyer H. M. S. Wishart and the British steamer Tsinan was an example of wonderful seamanship, survivors related.

Commander Todd of the Wishart brought his craft alongside the ill-fated ship at great risk in a heavy sea.

Twice huge waves forced the two vessels apart, but the Wishart returned and each time took men off. The Fulton's two launches and whaleboat were lowered, meanwhile, and conveyed others to the Tsinan.

Flames Spread Fast.

Fire broke out at 6:35 p. m. in the engine room and spread rapidly. Within a few minutes flames divided the ship fore and aft, putting the main boilers out of commission almost immediately. Pumps consequently could not be used to fight the blaze.

Officers were at mess when the alarm was given. Despite every effort, the fire was soon beyond control.

An emergency wireless set sent an SOS call, which the Tsinan first received and relayed to the Wishart. The Wishart, which with the Fulton was on patrol duty in Bias Bay against pirates, was first on the scene, arriving at 8 p. m.

The mishap occurred about 50 miles northeast of Hong Kong as the Fulton was en route to Foochow.

First assurance that the Fulton's crew was safe was contained in a message sent by the U. S. S. Isabel to Admiral Frank B. Upham, chief of the Asiatic Fleet, at Manila. It said:

"All officers and enlisted men have been saved; still standing by."

Hard-Luck Vessel.

The U. S. S. Tulsa had left Hong Kong for northern waters, and no other American warship was near the stricken craft.

The Fulton was 216 feet long and of 1,160 tons, and was known as the "grief ship" of the Navy.

In 1922 she drifted for three days off Cape Hatteras with a broken propeller shaft. Commissioned in 1914, she was one of the first American vessels to be equipped with Diesel engines.

The Fulton, commanded by Harry McHenry, last played a prominent role in protecting Americans in the Far East off Foochow, Fukien Province, in January, when a detachment went ashore during disorders arising from the anti-Nanking rebellion.

House Votes 10 Per Cent Pay Raise

Allowances to Veterans Are Increased in Rebellion.

lowances to former service men of the Spanish-American War and the World War and their dependents by approximately $90,000,000 above the original House bill but $28,000,000 under the Senate amendments.

This amendment was finally adopted by a record vote of 222 to 192.

Increased Veterans Pay.

Specifically, the Taber amendment raises the allowances for World War veterans by $30,000,000 and places about 29,000 presumptive World War cases on the rolls on a permanent basis at a rate of 75 per cent of the compensation received just prior to the passage of the economy act.

This latter clause increases allowances by $8,000,000 but is about $5,000,000 under the Senate allowance.

It increases the allowance for this class of former service men by $45,000,000, plus $5,500,000 for widows and dependents. This compares with the Senate amendment providing $61,487,000 for the veterans and $8,077,000 for widows and dependents.

Emergency officers' benefits, which in the Senate amendment amounted to $2,942,000, were stricken out by the Taber amendment.

Provisions Deleted.

Likewise it eliminates the Senate amendment providing that any World War veteran who has been adjudged permanently disabled by a court shall be rated permanently disabled on the pension rolls.

The double compensation for widows or dependents of officers and enlisted men who died in the Shenandoah, Akron, and J-3 crashes also was deleted.

Finally, the House by adopting the Taber amendment struck out the Borah amendment designed to retain the 15 per cent pay reduction for all Government salaries in excess of $6,000, including the salaries of members of Congress.

While the House was increasing veterans' allowances, President Roosevelt told newspapermen that he was prepared to veto the bonus bill and pointed out that if the Patman plan of printing greenbacks to pay the bonus were adopted there was a danger that it might lead to meeting regular Government expenses by a similar method.

The Patman bill would provide for the issuance of $2,200,000,000 in currency to pay the bonus which is not due until 1945.

Taber estimated that the 5-and-5 pay restoration would cost $28,000,000 for this fiscal year and $125,000,000 for the fiscal year 1935.

Full pay restoration has been estimated variously up to $215,993,124 as figured by Senator Byrnes. The sponsor of the full pay amendment in the Senate, Senator Steiwer (Republican), of Oregon, contends that it would be about $60,000,000 lower.

All other amendments to the independent Offices bill, 21 in number, were disagreed to by the House and sent to conference. They are of minor importance.

House Conferees.

Conferees named by the House included the full subcommittee which has handled the bill. Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, is chairman, and the members are Representatives Boylan (Democrat), of New York; Hastings (Democrat), of Oklahoma; Granfield (Democrat) of Massachusetts; Wigglesworth (Republican), of Massachusetts; and Goss (Republican), of Connecticut.

Senate conferees are Brynes, chairman; Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia; Hale (Republican), of Maine; Steiwer (Republican), or Oregon; and Russell (Democrat), of Georgia.

Just how soon the Senate will act on the new House amendments was not known last night, but it is expected that the entire bill may be in the White House by the end of the week unless further complications develop.

The House admittedly was confused as to the status of its amendments should the Senate disagree with them and send them to conference. Representative Woodrum, who sought to pilot the bill on the Democratic side, was asked several times whether the conferees would consider themselves bound by the action of the House should the amendments get to conference.

Despite the insistence of Republicans that the conferees should be so bound, Woodrum declined to commit himself definitely and stated that the conferees would "cross the bridge when they came to it." He intimated that they would not consider themselves bound.

Vote on Gag Rule.

Answering Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York, Woodrum said that the Republicans were a bit late in expressing their confidence in the conferees after helping defeat the rule which would have sent the bill to conference without instruction.

The most turbulent part of the eight-hour continuous House session, during which the presiding officer, Representative Oliver (Democrat), of New York, frequently had to halt proceedings to call for order, came when a vote was taken on the gag rule by the Appropriations Committee.

To the surprise of Administration leaders, who just before the House convened predicted that the rule would be adopted, 131 Democrats lined up with a solid Republican vote and the five Farmer-Laborites to overthrow the rule, which would have sent the bill to conference without instruction.

When it became apparent toward the end of the roll call that the rule was defeated, the Republicans and the veterans' bloc on the Democratic side broke into cheers.

Plead in Vain.

An hour's debate preceded the vote, and Republican leaders, headed by Minority Leader Snell, took occasion to denounce the Democratic leadership for imposing gag rules. Minority Leader Byrns also was caled to task for his previous statement on the flor that members of the House would have an opportunity to work out a compromise that would be acceptable to the Presiden.

Following the defeat of the rule, Woodrun obtained unanimous consent to send the 21 minor Senate amendments to conference with the House's disapproval. An hour's debate then was scheduled on the pay amendment, and two hours were set aside for debate of the veterans' amendment.

Connery Leads Fight.

During the course of the debate on the pay amendment it became apparent that the solid majority which had overthrown the gag rule would not stick together to vote for full pay. Republican party lines were broken although Minority Leader Snell, Representative Britten (Republican), of Illinois, and others spoke for full restoration.

Representative Connery (Democrat), of Massachusetts, chairman of the House Labor Committee, led the fight for full restoration and for concurrence in the Senate allowances to veterans on the Democratic side.

He resorted to every available parliamentary method to prevent amendments to the Senate aamendments and insisted that unless the Senate amendments were adopted without change the entire controversy would be thrown into conference and that the Administration leaders would then prevail.

Representa Dowell (Republican), Iowa, offered an amendment to retain the 15 per cent pay cut on all Government salaries above $6,000, but it was rejected 124 to 21.

Vote Is 157 to 139.

Representative Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, offered the prevailing 5-and-5 amendment. It was adopted first by voice and then by teller vote, the latter count being 157 to 139.

Throughout the two-hour debate on the veterans' compensations party lines again were broken, and in the vote on this amendment as well as the pay plan odd political alignments resulted. For instance, Representative Woodrum consistently voted against all amendments to the Senate amendments on the ground that it would be inconsistent with his insistence on sending the amendments to conference.

After Taber offered his compromise program the House suddenly began to reach an agreement which contrasted sharply with the former controversy.

Republican leaders smiled as the vterans' bloc on the Democratic side fell in accord with the program. It was the climax to a day of political triumphs for the small Republican minority in the House.

Only Connery led any spirited fight against the Taber compromise, and it was he who obtained enough votes to require a roll call vote after the House had dissolved as the committee of the whole.

Cites Veto Threat.

Taber told the House that in view of the Presidential veto threat his plan "is probably more than you can get for veterans in any other way."

While declining to predict what action Roosevelt would take on his proposal, he pointed out that he certainly would veto the Senate amendment.

Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, who piloted the successful bonus bill fight on Monday, sought to add an ammendment to provide benefits for widows of service-connected and disabled World War veterans who had died of natural causes. His proposal was never put to a vote.

Guatemala's Indian Craft Shown Today

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

A notable representation of Capital Society will attend the formal opening of the exhibit of the Osborne collection of Guatemalan textiles in the foyer of the National Museum this afternoon, at the invitation of the George Washington University.

The exhibit is sponsored jointly by the Center of Inter-American Studies of the University and the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

The Minister of Guatemala, Senor Dr. Don Adrian Recinos and Senora de Recinos, the president of the Carnegie Institution of Washington and Mrs. John C. Merriam, the president of the George Washington University and Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, and the director of the Center of Inter-American Studies and Mrs. Wilgus will receive in the foyer at 3 o'clock, after which Dr. Recinos will speak.

A Traveler's Triumph.

This historic collection, which will be open to the public from March 15 to April, was assembled by Mrs. Lilly de Jongh Osborne, who has devoted many years of study to Guatemalan textiles.

During twenty years of residence and travel in Guatemala Mrs. Osborne obtained from native Indian tribes rare samples of their craft. Many of the pieces of cloth and articles of dress are from tribes so isolated that they have not before been seen outside of the country.

Historical Record.

Every Indian village in Guatemala has its own distinctive costume for men, women, and children, while social distinctions also are indicated by the style of clothing worn.

Each village has its own dyes and guards the secret of their making. The designs used are symbolic, being handed down from generation to generation.

Mrs. Osborne's collection is of increasing historical interest, for today true tribal designs on the textiles are rapidly disappearing or becoming mixed with those of other tribes, while many of the men and women are discarding native costumes and adopting modern styles.

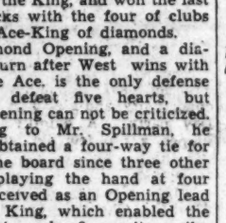
Making the Best of A Bad Situation.

No player is particularly pleased when he must play a hand at five of a major suit. While this contract is often reached by entirely correct bidding in which a Slam try is made and refused, the Declarer who is faced with the necessity of taking 11 tricks when 10 tricks would have been sufficient to secure a game is always fearful that some particularly unfavorable distribution will defeat his contract one trick, whereas a game could have been made had the bidding stopped at the safe level of four. Even though the bidding was unexceptionable, the Declarer usually regrets the one extra trick of the contract.

Today's hand, which was played by Mr. George T. Spillman, of Pittsburgh, Pa., in a Duplicate game, in spite of the precarious contract and very good defense, resulted in Declarer's tying for top-score on the board.

West, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



The bidding: (Figure after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

			Pass
1♡	2♣	2◇	2♠
4♡	Pass	5♡(1)	Pass
Pass (2)	Pass

1—After North's Jump to four hearts, South with three honor-tricks including the King of his partner's suit, can not be severely criticized for trying for a Slam.

2—Mr. Spillman quite properly decides not to heed his partner's Slam try, respecting the fact that both opponents have entered the bidding.

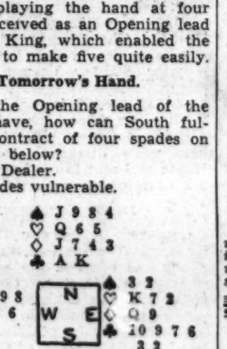
East's Opening lead was the spade 6. West won with the spade Ten and returned the seven of clubs, which the Declarer quite properly ducked, East winning with the Queen. Another spade was returned and ruffed by North. The trumps were then all played out, being carefully retained in Dummy, the Ace, King and nine of diamonds and the last trump lead squeezed East, who gave up his last guard to the club King. Mr. Spillman now played out his Ace of clubs, dropping the King, and won the last three tricks with the four of clubs and the Ace-King of diamonds.

A diamond Opening, and a diamond return after West wins with the spade Ace, is the only defense that can defeat five hearts, but East's Opening can not be criticized. According to Mr. Spillman, he merely obtained a four-way tie for top on the board since three other players playing the hand at four hearts received as an Opening lead the club King, which enabled the Declarer to make five quite easily.

Tomorrow's Hand.

With the Opening lead of the heart Knave, how can South fulfill his contract of four spades on the hand below?

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Easter eggs of rare and precious stones—of gold and silver—of enamels in every color and size were the gifts of royalty, while gayly painted eggs were the gifts of simple folk on the greatest of all Russian feast days—Easter Sunday.

A Georgian prince, nationally known perfume authority, has revived this custom with some creations of his own. Little Easter eggs in vivid colors of red, green, blue, white and yellow, open to disclose a triad of perfumes. There are smaller eggs, too, which contain one of the crown bottles with any one of five scents the shopper may choose.

Truly the prince sends his own Easter greeting with each one of these unique parcels, for they are so reasonably priced this season that any of us can well afford to have one of the most attractive Easter eggs of the season.

The Whole Works.

A cosmetician who has long pleased both a European and American public with her preparations is presenting an Easter package with exciting contents.

Inside of a pastel box, nestled in the midst of much paper grass, are soap, lip stick, rouge, compact, perfume, face powder, cleansing cream, tissue cream. Another box with virtually the same contents has also a gland cream, a new product that has already received wide acclaim. It was created for the express purpose of erasing the tired lines from faces—lines that sooner or later develop into wrinkles.

It would be pleasant at Easter time to receive a box containing all the skin preparations a person will need for the next several months—preparations of the highest quality.

Unfortunate for Moths.

It's going to be a bad season for moths from the looks of the artillery appearing on store counters.

There are the vapor crystals looking like small, clear pebbles, but giving off an odor that means death and destruction to moths. These are for sprinkling in chest drawers, between layers of blankets in the cabinet, wherever the moth might show his face. When cold weather comes around again and chests and drawers are opened up, many a housewife will be surprised to find that the crystals have entirely disappeared. They evaporate with contact with air and turn to the moth-killing vapor.

A large, ominous-looking container is filled with another sort of death-dealing material. It is to be hung high in the closet after two sides of the container have been removed. From small holes pieced against an inner compartment, a moth gas heavier than air, penetrates downward. It is powerful enough to protect a wardrobe or closet of 85 cubic feet.

A liquid spray contains disolved moth gas which seeks out all moths hiding in rugs, furs, furniture and draperies and spells destruction in no uncertain terms.

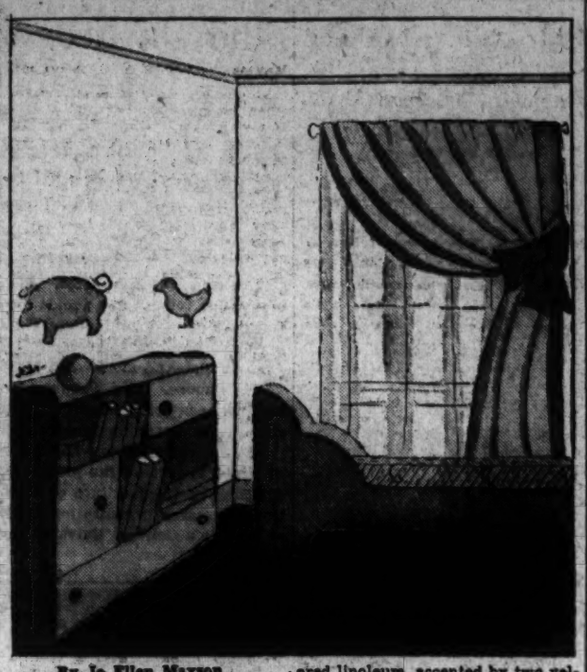
Modern Nursery Caters To Child's Point of View



By Jo Ellen Maxson.

The three little pigs have entered the nursery and have brought with them some new ideas about colors and furnishings. Th modern nursery is decorated from the child's point of view, using practical features in a delightfully imaginative way to add new zest to play hours.

Picture book walls not only show the pigs and the big, bad wolf, but all of Mother Goose. These are an important part of one successful nursery decorated on a limited budget. The Mother Goose animals and figures are Swedish cut-outs of heavy pasteboard in gay, fresh colors, they form an eye-level border around the pale yellow walls.

The floor is covered in slate-colored linoleum, accented by two yellow sheepskin rugs in the shapes of wooly Scotch terriers. The woodwork is painted flat ivory.

At the windows, curtains of sheer, cream-colored voile admit the maximum amount of light. There are ruffled over-drapes, one at each window, of gray-blue voile, are drawn to one side and tied with large yellow bows.

The furniture, enameled gray-blue, is well constructed and has simple pleasing lines to make good first impressions on a child's plastic mind. A quaint flower motif in bright, pleasant colors is painted on the front of each piece and on the headboard of the bed.

What Today Means

"Pisces."

If March 15 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 to 11 a. m., from 1 to 2 p. m. and from 4 to 5 p. m. The danger periods are from 6 to 7 a. m., from 2:30 to 3:30 p. m. and from 8 to 9 p. m.

If March 15 is your birthday, you will find life easier if you will cultivate the habit of looking for the bright side of issues that arise from time to time. Just constantly remember that "every cloud has a silver lining." Things that look ominous, when shrouded in darkness, prove many times ridiculous when light is shed upon them. Most of our fears are purely imaginary. Too many of us indulge in nightmares of our own making when we can learn to visualize, just as readily, happy dreams with optimistic promises as their substance. Your life is filled with unlimited opportunities, and it will be your own fault if you do not grasp them. Peace, success and contentment are your inalienable rights.

The child born on March 15, as it grows up, should be taught that a smile is always better than a tear, and that courage sustains where fear breaks down. It will be surprising, if these thoughts are planted early in its childhood, how helpful they will prove.

The woman born on March 15 will be happy if she only will learn not to try to anticipate what might happen in the vague future.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

To Scratch or Not to Scratch.

Itching is a symptom which has the peculiarity of being unpleasant because it is so pleasant and because it provokes scratching, a reaction with the same qualities.

The symptom, in the first place, serves notice of something that needs to be removed. In this, it is akin to pain and sensitiveness. But these are always unpleasantnesses. There is a condition, known as masochism, in which a man gets pleasure out of his own pain or discomfort.

The instinctive reaction to itching is to scratch. We encounter it in animals far lower than man. Dogs and cats like to scratch themselves, as do hogs, not to mention monkeys. The best way to soothe an excited horse is to scratch the skin between his underjaws. There is a delight and joy in mildly rubbing and scatching the normal skin and it is greatly increased when there is any skin disorder of which itching is a symptom.

Certain of the remedies in common use for relief in itching disorders are beneficial, principally for psychologic reasons. It is for that reason we wash patches of hives with soda water, or use some of the salves of accepted value in poison ivy dermatitis.

Beggars All

Chapter XXIX.

Madrone's eyes were haggard. Rondo bent over, bend down and kissed him on both cheeks.

"Nino mio, before the saints, believe me, we would not give you up."

"Nor this American gentleman, no, I swear."

"O. K. then. Take out Eugenio. And promise them whatever they ask. Tell them, yes, yes, you will give me up and Courvoisier, too—anyone for the sake of the ladies and the guests. Tell them to go off a little and you will have us tied up and taken out to them. They will believe—they do not know our love, Rondo, nor our kinship in the old country, eh?"

"No, no," cried Rondo with extraordinary passion, "what do they know of our love, my gratitude? I will tell the others. I will tell Eugenio." But suddenly quite pale and timid, he turned to Rafe, "that is if you agree to this plan, Signor Courvoisier."

"I agree," said Rafe. "Keep them all out in front there for as long as you can." He was watching the wounded man. There was a change in Madrone's handsome face. His eyes had changed. When the others had gone, Rafe came to stand beside him, bending down.

"Listen Madrone. I'm going out now to try to get one of those boats. They may have left a sentry, but I reckon I can account for him. I'll get you out of this, over to Chetteraw, to see a doctor. We can land at a certain wharf—a restaurant, that belongs to a friend of your own. From his house I can telephone to the police and they will make at once to this island."

The broad, pale face relaxed a little from its strained suspense. "Ah, yes, yes, we can do that if you can get the boat, but——" As Rafe turned, he felt himself caught, a hard circle pressed deep into his spine. "Now," hissed Madrone behind him, "stand still. Before you go there is something you must do for me. Something you have promised. Something you will have to die here now for a refusal."

"What do you want?" Rafe whispered.

"You must bring me that priest and be married before me now, here—to Hortense Kendall."

Rafe stood still. "So that was it." He laughed breathlessly. 'Mr. Madrone," he said, "believe me, I have already been married to her. Tonight. In that room yonder. Maddalena and the clergyman were witnesses. I have the marriage papers, here, all perfectly in order. The bridegroom's name had not been written in. You see now that, as you yourself intended, it is mine."

Rafe heard the gun rattle to the floor as Madrone fell back. He managed to raise his head and to look at the paper Rafe produced.

"Dio mio! Of your own free will. Rafe Courvoisier to Hortense Kendall. That would make the angels in heaven laugh. If I were not sick, I would laugh myself—for joy and also for astonishment."

Rafe saw, indeed, a ghastly face of shining and malignant triumph. He lifted Madrone's automatic from the floor and, after an instant's anxious study of that ashen face with eyes closed, dropped it into his other pocket, repossessed himself of the marriage paper, and went out.

There was a great cellar under the Courvoisier house which Rafe remembered with all the detailed accuracy of childhood memories. One of its subterranean passages led out by a walled channel to the sea. Rafe had often used this exit for his truancies. He thought now that no way could be more adequate for his purpose than this one. He went, therefore, down through the deserted kitchen by a cellar stairway and using his flashlight found the passage and the old cobwebby door. Its rusted bolts gave him some trouble and the alarm of grating noise, but he got the door open, ran down the walled trench, and found himself on the remembered landing place.

Strego's plan, he now reminded himself, had been to approach the house by its south end. He'd have left the boats, then, probably, handy for escape not far from the spot where Madrone had disembarked upon the early morning of his secret arrival.

Rafe went softly along the shore, but with nothing like his former caution. His surmise was right. He stumbled almost immediately upon a boat. It was not, however, one of those stolen from the boathouse. It was Torkwist's rowboat; he recognized it by its muffled oarlocks and the stains of his own blood upon the floor. He slid it delicately off the sand, got himself soundlessly aboard, and moved it as silently as he could along the shore to the sheltered cellar entrance. Then he ran back up through the house to get Madrone.

If You Want to Give a Real St. Patrick's Day Party Here Is a Very Irish Menu, Complete With All-Green Foods.

By Susan Mills.

Pretty soon Irish eyes will be smiling, and Irish hearts will be happy, and St. Patrick will be having his day. Everybody will be getting together to celebrate the occasion.

Whether or not you may be Irish, why not make the most of this glad opportunity, and give a St. Patrick's Day party? A daintily prepared supper, and a few old Irish songs, and the evening will be pleasantly remembered.

Here are a few suggestions concerning the food. You furnish the singing.

St. Patrick's Day Menu.

Canape Shamrock
Puree of Split Pea Soup
Lamb Chops with Mint Jelly
Potatoes O'Brien Buttered Broccoli
Shad Roe and Watercress Salad
Pistachio Ice Cream
Coffee

To begin at the beginning, the canapes can be made of that delicately tinted green bread, cut with a cookie cutter shaped like the ace of clubs. The ace of clubs is not quite synonymous with a shamrock, but the effect is nearly the same. Spread the bread with cream cheese colored with vegetable coloring, or a plain cheese sprinkled with chopped parsley and green pepper.

The soup needs no explanation. A good cook book will furnish a recipe.

Potatoes O'Brien are "O'Brien-ed" with the addition of chopped green pepper. Chop the cooked potatoes the desired size, and brown very slightly in butter, add the peppers and serve.

For the salad, cut the shad roe in cubes and saute in butter until golden brown; serve on watercress with French dressing.

Pistachio ice cream is conveniently green, but if its flavor is not popular among your guests, you may serve a brick of vanilla ice cream with lime gelatine on top. Little cakes with green frosting may be purchased at your favorite bakers.

How the Junior Miss Looks At the New Spring Fashions

By Jane Stuart.

A lot of exciting new clothes are heading straight for Washington sub-debs this spring. You may as well get used right now to the idea of being a great deal more dressed up in the daytime. Imagine wearing a street dress of tailored chiffon, shadowy black, with a mass of white petaled mousseline de soie encircling your throat. Lansburgh's has a dress exactly like that in their Junior Miss Shop. You'll never feel truly sophisticated until you own it! Right next to it is a tailored chiffon ensemble, navy or light blue, with big collar and cuffs of white mousseline.

You hear a crisp swish in smart places these days. It's taffeta . . . the big surprise featured at the Paris openings. Lansburgh's Junior Shop already has a rustling taffeta dress with fine hairline checks . . . a plain taffeta suit . . . and a dress with big bows and "streamline" pleats, caught by that same wind that is sweeping motion into all spring fashions . . . and they are very reasonably priced, too.

If you are going to buy only one spring dress, by all means get a jacket frock . . . it's absolutely the most important fashion for daytime. The Lansburgh's Junior Miss expert told me she will have some very soon in polka dot sheers that are too smart for words. Better get down there and take a look.

Next to the jacket frock in importance is the redingote . . . a long wool coat with a plain or print silk dress . . . that's "Sonia" sketched and it is a dream.

And, of course, there is a regular snowstorm of white trimmings on navy dresses . . . bows, loops, ruchings, of pique, linen or mousseline. They are your white sign posts on the road to fashion . . . don't miss them!

Ruffles and more ruffles . . . billowy clouds of net to swathe you in misty loveliness . . . that's the way you'll look after sundown. Most of the new evening dresses touch the floor, but only a few have a slight suggestion of a train. And certainly if you want to be ultra-ultra you'll have a neckline that's low in the front. Choose lace, mousseline de soie, net or printed chiffons . . . you'll find them in Lansburgh's Junior Shop.

Speaking of net, they have a new cocktail dress, or "bar" frock . . . which is the perfect answer of what to wear when an afternoon frock is too informal. It's a heavy sheer sheath with an alluring top of net, gathered into a Harlequin ruff at the neck.

I haven't space to tell you more, but all you juniors can call me at District 7575 and I'll be delighted to help you plan your spring wardrobe.

Staunton, Va., March 14 (Spl.).—Now nearly complete and open to the public is the Woodrow Wilson memorial garden at the manse of the First Presbyterian Church in Staunton. It was in this house that Dr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Wilson made their home during Dr. Wilson's pastorate in Staunton, and there on December 28, 1856, that Woodrow Wilson was born.

The garden, Victorian in form, was the gift of the Garden Club of Virginia, made possible by a part of the funds raised last year during the historic garden tour. This tour is an annual event conducted by the club. The proceeds of it are used in restoring publicly owned historic gardens in the State. The tour this year will take place during garden garden week, April 23-28.

Gillett Is Architect.

From plans made by Charles F. Gillette, Richmond landscape architect, a lovely garden has been recreated. Access is by means of a circular walk of old brick, which leads to a brick wistaria-covered arbor on the first terrace. Here one finds an English box hedge, compact and symmetrical, which was brought from the vicinity of Lynchburg.

Shading the stretch of lawn are mounded apple trees, under which are planted lilies-of-the-valley. This terrace is outlined with yellow Harrison roses and pink flowering almond. On either side of the central walkway is a grape arbor, under which have been planted 20 varieties of old-fashioned roses—Damask, Hundred Leaf, Cabbage, Duchesse de Brabant and York and Lancaster.

On the last terrace, in a setting of calycanthus, snowballs and lilacs, one comes upon a Victorian bow-knot flower bed, brick-edged and box-bordered, with thyme, lavender, heliotrope and tulips. Around the entire garden is a lilac hedge overhanging a brick wall which marks the boundary line, and across the front of the property stretches an old iron fence. A sun dial, the gift of the Colonial Dames of Virginia, is in the lower garden. A bronze tablet has been put on the house by the First Presbyterian Church.

Restoration Committee.

Mrs. Thomas H. Boggs, of Fredericksburg, is chairman of the restoration committee of the Garden Club of Virginia. The actual work of directing and planting the garden was done by a committee appointed from the Augusta Garden Club, Mrs. H. McK. Smith, chairman; Mrs. R. Morris Armistead, president; Mrs. J. L. Witz, vice president; Mrs. W. W. Gibbs, Mrs. A. T. Moore, Mrs. H. S. Green, Mrs. Clarke Worthington, Mrs. L. W. H. Peyton, Mrs. Carter Braxton, Mrs. Fitzhugh Elder, Mrs. Thomas H. Russell, Misses May Murphy, Elizabeth Rawlinson, Sadie Weller and Glenn Atkinson.

On May 25, 1933, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson met these women at the home of Mrs. H. McK. Smith, and expressed her approval of the design of the garden.

A. B. Overrated, Educator Says

Degrees Don't Help Job Hunters, Speaker Declares.

The A. B. degree is like the gold dollar—it doesn't buy what it should. And college graduates who tuck their degrees under their arms and go out to startle the world with their superior knowledge, are soon startled by their own inability to cope with life.

Mrs. Marion Coates Graves, director of the experimental college group of New York, emphasized this fact last night in her address, "The Commodity Dollar in Education." She spoke before members of the American Association of University Women at a dinner at their clubhouse.

"A recent conference, which both business executives and executives of college placement boards attended in New York showed how sadly the average college fails in its work of preparing the student for success in the outer world," Mrs. Graves declared. "Students should learn things in college that will be of significant value in the greater world outside the college campus."

Mrs. Graves then traced the more significant trends in educational methods in the past few years.

"The greatest change was made when the humanitarian subjects were substituted for the classics. Of course, the classics should be studied if they are of significance to the individual," she said, "but I do not think that they should be overemphasized.

"More recently, educators have said that no subject should be taught a student, that he should learn through his own interest. We now know that this system teaches him to be very selfish.

"Students should study those things that are significant socially. Only in that way can the ideal of greater justice to all humanity be attained."

Mrs. Jean Dean Cole introduced Mrs. Graves at the dinner, which was given under the auspices of the education committee of the association. Mrs. Richard Hogue is chairman of the committee.

House Committee Decides Four Representatives Enough at Funeral.

By Mildred Reed Bundy.

Edith Nourse Rogers, Representative from Massachusetts, in a vivid purple gown, held the center of attention for a dramatic moment during the tense House session Wednesday afternoon over the Federal pay and veterans' compensation amendments.

When Representative Carl M. Weideman, of Michigan, declared that too many "crocodile tears" were being shed on too many subjects, including "the tears shed by Mrs. Rogers over the Army air-mail fliers," the Massachusetts Representative sprang to her feet, dashed forward and asked the "gentleman from Michigan to yield."

"I am not ashamed of my tears over the Army fliers," she exclaimed. "I AM ashamed of the gentleman from Michigan, if he, too, can not shed tears over the fliers."

All of the seven women members of the House of Representatives were present during the session of Wednesday afternoon except Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, whose absence was due to illness in her family. The only other vivid costume in the feminine contingent, in addition to Mrs. Rogers' purple gown, was Mrs. Isabella Greenway's henna-colored frock, worn with a distinctive knotted scarf in bold brown and white design.

• • • •

The votes against Administration moves cast by Mrs. Greenway are particularly courageous because of her personal friendship for Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. Her vote Wednesday was anti-Administration.

Recently Mrs. Greenway was applauded heartily by Republicans for her speech against cuts in veterans' pay. And her outspoken disapproval of the President's Army air-mail policy also demonstrated her ability to subordinate friendship to personal conviction.

Will Rogers, Representative from Oklahoma, receives many requests from all parts of the country to include various appeals in his "broadcasts." All such requests cause a steady forwarding of letters from the Oklahoman's Congressional desk to Comedian Will Rogers, California.

Some laughs came out of the decision of a House committee to send only four Representatives to funerals of fellow members — even though the subject as stated sounds anything but humorous.

For years there has been no rule about how many members were allowed their expenses in attending such funerals. Often twenty or more would entrain for some far point, ostensibly to pay final respects to a deceased member.

On one occasion when $22,000 was spent to send a group to a funeral, only two of the group ever reached the destination. Stops were made at pleasure resorts or for visits to relatives.

During the meeting for drastic curtailment of mourning trips, these amusing remarks were made:

"Well, it's fine we can have at least four of us, for without a quartet how could we sing 'Sweet Adeline.'"—Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, Virginia.

"In the years since 1900 when I was in the Press Gallery of the House, many members have gone to funerals the country over, and certainly have had bird's-eye views of the United States."—Representative Louis Ludlow, Indiana.

"And wasn't I scared when I was sent to the funeral of Senator Warren when we had to wear top hats! Me—in a top hat, in the town where the highest hat I ever wore was a ten-gallon sort! I was afraid I'd get hit."—Representative Vincent Carter, former cowboy from Wyoming.

Greece Gives Silver Cross To Miss Carr

Miss Alice G. Carr, director of health work for the Near East Foundation in the Balkans, who has been awarded the Silver Cross of the Order of the Phoenix by the Greek government, will receive her decoration at a reception Monday afternoon in the Red Cross Auditorium.

The Silver Cross was awarded Miss Carr a few weeks ago after she left Greece for her first home furlough in twelve years. She is expected to arrive in Washington Sunday afternoon.

The presentation of the award, an unusual distinction for a woman, will be made by the Hon. Charalambos Simopoulos, Greek Minister to the United States. The Silver Cross is given in recognition of Miss Carr's eleven years' work in the control of tuberculosis, which, following the influx of a million and a half Anatolian refugees into Greece in 1922 and 1923, seriously menaced the health of the Balkan peninsula.

The reception will be attended by many Government officials and members of the diplomatic circle, as well as representatives of the Red Cross, with whom Miss Carr served in Austria, Poland and Czechoslovakia following service in France with the base unit of the Johns Hopkins Hospital. Mrs. Katherine W. Reynolds, Washington representative of the Near East Foundation, is in charge of arrangements for the reception.

Monday night a reception will be given for Miss Carr at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, when her friends and former colleagues will welcome her back after 17 years of almost continuous service abroad.

World-Stage.

By Katherine Smith.

If lines I speak leave emptiness
Behind me when I go my way,
If this, our dialogue, is less
Dramatic than you hoped, the play
Will still go on. And so, polite,
We prattle through a plot unknown,
But let us share the stage tonight—
Tomorrow we may act alone.

Ernst Conrad Haase, Who Has Been Concertizing in This Country, Considers Washington Is Excessively European.

"American woman? I understand her about as well as I understand—this soup!"

Sitting at luncheon in a little tea room here, Ernst Conrad Haase, young Bavarian singer, who has been concertizing in this country for the last several months, stared into his soup plate and presented his views on the matter.

He dipped his spoon in the soup, tasted it thoughtfully.

"It is good, but, how shall I say? I can not comprehend it. Besides, I should not commit myself; it is not safe.

"Washington? I love the city! It is more like Europe than any city. I walk along Sixteenth street, I see Europe. It is in the buildings, in the people. But in New York, one is always busy. One answers the telephone, 'No, I can not go out tonight—I am too busy!' Or one meets a friend; 'No, I can not do that; I am too busy.' It is always the same, busy, busy, busy! It is a terrible place.

"I shall be in Washington only until the 22d, but I wish it could be for years.

"Yes, I am going back to Germany in April. I shall study and sing in concerts and on the radio. My teacher? It is the opera. I have heard almost all operas, and some of them as many as 20 times." His blue eyes shown with enthusiasm.

Germán Radio.

"Radio work in Germany is different—more specialized than here. The programs are like concerts. Good music is presented. There are criticisms.

"But so many people sing and it goes to their heads. A young lady will study three years, then she will sing over the radio. It is terrible.

"Then she will say, 'I have sung over the radio!'" He elevated his head and tipped his nose, "and it is so bad. I hate it!"

"Do I ever get nervous at a concert?" His eyes widened with astonishment. "But why? No, I never get nervous. I tell a nervous artist that the audience is like so many—how do you say?—cabbage heads." He laughed.

"I have sung, oh, a long time—about 11 years. I have played the piano longer, but I would rather sing. I am always enthusiastic about it—oh, I wish I had more English," he passed an impatient hand over his fair hair. "I have so much to say, and so few words.

Has Enthusiasm.

"But I hope I shall always have enthusiasm. Then I will stay young. I am 32 now. I hope I shall feel the same at 70. What? Yes, perhaps I have eternal youth," he threw back his head and laughed.

Then he frowned suddenly and groped in his vocabulary.

"I am sorry, I have a depression today. Perhaps it is because I have no language. But it will not matter—it is only a mood. I shall be gay soon. I am glad moods are so different; it is a variety, no?"

Herr Hasse will present a recital of German leider at the Arts Club Saturday night. He has come to Washington from Texas, where he gave several recitals, both in concert and on the radio.

Study of Economic Trends Urged for Ambitious Girls

Author of "Careers for Women" Thinks Even College Women Are Headed for Dead-End Jobs Today, Unless They Plan Ahead.

By Elizabeth Young.

The smart woman looks before she leaps into a given field of occupation today. She avoids too much competition, male or female. Imagination and forethought are among her best weapons for battering down the door to success.

So much—and more—one gleans from a chat with Mrs. Catherine Filene Shouse. Mrs. Shouse is an authority on careers for women. She has been doing research in occupational opportunities for women since her undergraduate days at Wheaton College.

She has compiled two books on "Careers for Women"—the second of which is just off the press—and she is chairman of the board of directors of the Institute of Women's Professional Relations, a National research organization founded in 1928. Its headquarters are at Women's College, University of North Carolina.

Need New Fields.

"The biggest problem now facing college and high school women is how they can market their abilities so as to be economically independent," Mrs. Shouse said yesterday.

"New developments in many lines of work are providing some openings, yes. But these times demand imagination on the part of women, so as to relate their educational program to these new jobs.

"The woman who has something to offer has the best chance of getting a place. Too much has been said and thought about women competing with men for jobs. A great many jobs are now in process of development for which women are particularly fitted and in which there will be less of this kind of competition."

New Jobs Created.

By way of illustrating her point, Mrs. Shouse cited jobs created by the production of commodities of which women are principal buyers, such as electrical and household equipment and food products. She also mentioned the recently discovered value of women consultants in architects' offices; and new technical and professional work open to women in the fields of radio and aviation.

"Women know best," she said, "what women consumers need in the way of general equipment for the home. They also know what kind of advertising is most effective for these products. Women with home economics training are in many business capacities, such as copy writing for advertising firms, consultants in manufacturing concerns, in laboratories and so on. In architecture, they can give invaluable advice about the personal details of home building."

It is the function of the institute with which Mrs. Shouse is affiliated to discover and present to high school and college girls a panorama of occupational opportunities that will help them in determining their educational program, and in directing their studies toward a definite goal. The institute is the only National clearing house for such information for women in America.

Careers 15 Years Ago.

Mrs. Shouse spoke of the limited opportunities for girls in the business world 15 years ago—when girls thought of a "career" largely in terms of teaching or social service work.

"To stand a chance in either of those two over-crowded fields today, a girl must have a specified education and other qualifications," she said. "She must have a basic knowledge of social conditions and administrative methods. She can't go into it on pure emotion.

"She will do better for herself, unless she happens to have been born with a gift for teaching or social work, to study economic trends, foresee new fields and fit herself for a leading role in the one of her choice.

"Unless they give thought to their future work even women with college training are headed for 'dead-end' jobs, or no job at all, today."

Within the next ten months, the institute hopes to make available a complete classification of jobs open to "white collar" women workers.

"The census of 1930 showed over 500 classifications of work for the professional and trained woman, but there has never been a really adequate occupational survey," Mrs. Shouse said. "The institute is now engaged in a survey dating back to 1900, showing occupational trends for women. It should be ready for publication in eight to ten months.

"During the war, a list informally compiled showed women doing 2,700 different kinds of work. Five years after the war, the number dropped to 1,500. Women got their real impetus toward economic sufficiency during the war."

Economic security in a changing social order can be furthered, in Mrs. Shouse's opinion, by making occupational information and vocational guidance an integral part of education.

Imagination Necessary.

"Such instances as 1,500 qualified women making application for a single place as hostess on an air liner—which, I understand, happened recently—reveal the tremendous need of developing more occupations, and more imagination with regard to occupations," she said.

"The trial-and-error method of finding a job is definitely outmoded. The age of specialization has begun. Industry demands trained workers. Nor should industry be charged with the entire task of orienting the person to the job in the face of the possibility that the person may have made a mistaken choice of occupation."

However, Mrs. Shouse's new book offers a symposium of opinion on occupation by more than 150 women pioneers in different fields, who evidently made no mistake in their choice, judging from the success they have achieved. Among these contributors are Secretary of Labor, Perkins, Judge Florence E. Allen, Maj. Julia C. Stimson, Sculptor Brenda Putnam, Police Capt. Rhoda Milliken, Sea-Diver Margaret Campbell Goodman, Playwright Rachel Crothers and Radio Engineer Helen Klein.

Sane Attitude Toward Sex Claimed for Modern Youth

Not so many years ago preachers thundered in their pulpits that the wages of sin were death, while parents painted lurid pictures of the fate awaiting those who strayed from the straight and narrow path. Young people listened, and as a result, were generally supposed to be moral and circumspect.

"But those days are past," Dr. Walter Clarke, of New York, medical director of the American Social Hygiene Association, said yesterday. Dr. Clarke is in Washington to lecture at the Institute on social hygiene health problems, being held by the District Social Hygiene Society.

"Young people of today refuse to bow to authority, without being told why it is advisable for them to be moral," said Dr. Clarke. "Their attitude toward sex problems is scientific and matter-of-fact, and much more admirable than the hysteria and morbid curiosity of their fathers and mothers."

Dr. Clarke explained that the social hygiene education was attempting to instruct youth in the principles of sex knowledge.

"When they come to us with their sex problems, we show them that sexual control must be on the basis of intelligent choice. For instance, many young persons, unable to marry for financial reasons, have considered living together without marriage.

Well, a doctor points out the physical hazards, while another adviser shows them that such action results in social ostracism. Then, most probably, they will abandon the idea."

Dr. Clarke does not advise the teaching of sex principles as a separate subject in high schools and colleges.

"Facts relating to sex are a part of our daily lives, and should not be given special significance by teaching them as a thing apart," he said. "Parents should give their children the information whenever possible. By teaching sex principles in biology, sociology and psychology courses in schools and colleges, we are trying to train the parents of the future for their job. Our work in this line has been most successful."

Bank Women Model Styles

Leaves Ledgers and Cash Box for One Glamorous Evening.

Bank women of Washington left their ledgers and cash drawers last night to enact the role of fashion models. They displayed what the well dressed woman will wear this spring at office, tea, dinner, theater and sports.

Particular attention attached to the exhibits of correct dress for street and office. In these the trim jacket suit was a favorite with the redingote outfit a runner-up.

A fashion show and Monte Carlo party was held in the main ballroom of the Raleigh Hotel by the women's committee of the Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking. About 200 guests attended.

The committee in charge of the event was composed of Constance Fogle, chairman, Riggs National Bank; Vivian Stokes, secretary, Hamilton National Bank; Catherine McCalmont, treasurer, W. B. Hibbs & Co.; Harriet Barrett, Riggs National Bank; S. Winifred Burwell, National Metropolitan Bank; Anne Crawford, McLachlen Banking Corporation; Sally Finley, American Security & Trust Co.; Rosalie Goodhart, Second National Bank; Myrtle Lewis, Liberty National Bank; Etheline Parker, Security Savings & Commercial Bank; Rose Royce, Washington Loan & Trust Co.; Laila Sloat, National Metropolitan Bank; Anne Sullivan, Morris Plan Bank; Alcena White, American Security & Trust Co.; Alice Whitton, First National Bank, Alexandria, Va., and Gertrude Wick, Liberty National Bank.

The women's committee of the Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, has a membership of about 100.

Federal Juries To Sift Income Tax Evasions

National Revenue Bureau Superceded Under New Plan.

By Raymond Clapper.

As the final hour for filling income tax returns arrived, the Administration made known that it has adopted a new policy toward alleged income tax evasions under which grand juries rather than administrative officials in the Internal Revenue Bureau will decide, hereafter, whether in contested cases, there has been intent to evade on the part of taxpayers.

It became known yesterday that there are several hundred cases waiting to be turned over to grand juries under this new policy. The first cases were announced last week-end when the Department of Justice gave notice that it was forwarding to United States district attorney, data on cases against Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury; James J. Walker, former mayor of New York; Thomas S. Lamont, of J. P. Morgan & Co., and Thomas L. Sidlo, law partner of Newton D. Baker. Others will follow as rapidly as data can be put into proper shape.

Intent Is Issue.

In explaining the new policy, it was said that when a taxpayer's return, either in the amount of income listed or in the amount of tax, falls short of what the Government believes is due, there arises immediately the question as to whether there was intent to cheat the Government or merely an error or misconception of the law. In each such case the Government is brought face to face with the problem of determining what the taxpayer's motive was. President Roosevelt feels that is a question which should not be left to the decision of administrative officials in the Internal Revenue Bureau. It puts the Government in a difficult position, as the Administration sees it. Whether the Government lets off the big fellow or goes after him, it will be criticized either for favoritism or for persecution.

In this dilemma, it was decided that the grand jury system provides excellent impartial machinery for deciding such questions. When grand juries find no criminal intent to defraud the Government, civil suit will then be entered over the contested taxes. Under this method, the Administration expects to submit cases of both big and little taxpayers and let local grand juries pass on them without favor.

"Influence Racket" Hit.

There is some question as to how many of the smaller cases it will be practicable to carry into this more tedious routine. Over the last few years there have been an average of 2,377 returns annually which have been held by the penal division of the Internal Revenue Bureau to have been deliberately falsified. In 1931, the Bureau investigated 603,428 returns and found 108,675 required changes. Of these, it was held 80,731 had been honest mistakes and 17,944 were doubtful.

The new policy is the result of an effort by Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of the Treasury, to stamp out what is known as the "influence racket" around the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Many former officials of this Bureau have left it to enter law practice specializing in tax cases. In one case involving millions of dollars, the attorney for the tax-paying corporation had formerly been an important official in the bureau and some of his hold-over appointees passed on the case. One important official of the bureau who believed time and, in the long run, money would be gained by settling suits by negotiation on a civil basis was requested to resign when he took issue with Mr. Morgenthau.

Disinterested Attorney.

In selecting a successor, Mr. Morgenthau insited upon bringing in a lawyer who had never had a tax practice in Washington. He also called in the former president of the New York City Bar Association, Charles C. Burlingham, to tighten regulations governing the practice of attorneys and accountants before the Treasury Department.

All of this, including the new method of handling allegedly criminal tax cases, is part of the broad general campaign against "back-door" influence, real or alleged.

Treasury officials are cheered by the increase in income tax collections. Thus far in March they have run $20,000,000 above last year's, although it is pointed out that a year ago tax payments were delayed in many cases because of bank closings. Collections for the first 12 days of March were $33,073,277 as against $10,377,625 for the same period a year ago.

A comparison covering the fiscal year from July 1 to March 12 showed income tax collections of $391,280,266, as against $393,717,268 for the corresponding period of the previous fiscal year.

In general, receipts showed marked increase compared with last year, apparently partly due to liquor taxes and partly to increased business activity. Total receipts thus far in the fiscal year were, up to March 12, $2,022,761,410, compared with $1,294,574,544 for the corresponding period of the previous fiscal year. However, out of this year's receipts must be deducted $233,436,246 collected in processing taxes on farm products, a new item in the Treasury balance sheet. On the other hand, proceeds from foreign debts dropped sharply during this fiscal year. Miscellaneous internal revenue taxes, which included liquor revenues, total $1,043,252,585 this year, as compared with $549,830,694 in the previous corresponding period.

Prison Marriage Binds But Fails To Unite Couple

Sutton, W. Va., March 14 (Spl.). Locks and bars could not keep Clarence Hall and Miss Pina Boggs from getting married, even though they will be separated for a time.

Hall ran afoul of West Virginia's antiweapon law and is serving six months in jail here. But he and his fiancee did not want to wait until his term was out before they became husband and wife. So they pleaded with the sheriff and he fixed things up.

Hall was taken from his cell to the entrance hall of the jail, where he met Miss Boggs and the Rev. H. W. Martin, pastor of the Sutton Baptist Church, who performed the ceremony. Then Hall was taken back to his cell while Mrs. Hall returned home.

"Exaggerated," Says Foulois Of Air Deaths

New York, March 14 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of Army Air Service, arrived from Washington to inspect Mitchel Field today and declared that Army air casualties "have not been excessive in any way, shape or form." He piloted the plane in which he arrived.

To support an expressed contention that fatalities have not been high due to the carrying of air mail by the Army, he cited 50 Army air deaths in the fiscal year, 1932, 46 in 1933. The fiscal year begins on July 1.

"To date," he said, "there have been 39 deaths. Of course, according to the law of averages there will be more."

Foulois will go to Chicago tomorrow and return to Washington by Saturday. He met Maj. B. O. Jones, head of the Eastern zone, at Mitchel Field and telegraphed to the heads of Western zones to meet him at Chicago.

He said he intended to make thorough inspection of personnel and equipment and report the facts to the newly created Air Investigating Division next week. He is a member of the commission.

"This is only the beginning of the reorganization of flying, commercial, civil and military," he continued.

"The Army's carrying the mail has been the best thing in the world to test men and material."

He hoped to have the Army planes roaring over the mail courses again by Saturday.

"Schedules will go into effect as soon as I find that planes and men are up to the standard I think is necessary," he said.

Reminded of the denial of Assistant Secretary of War Woodring that he was the man who told the President that Foulois had said the Army was capable of carrying the mail, he said:

"Mr. Woodring's denial is correct."

"Military flying is equally as strenuous as commercial flying," he said, "and sometimes more so."

A Good Dinner Makes a Bad Day for Blackie

IN some things Blackie was very much like some children. Even some grown people are a good deal that way. He was all the time saying that he would do so-and-so, if such-and-such a thing happened, or that he just wouldn't do some other things. He would make lots of fun of horses and donkeys for letting Mr. Man and his neighbors hitch them up to wagons and plows, and ride on their backs, and he would tell Dr. Coon and Billie Possum how he would run away and tear up the wagon, and cut up Jack, generally, if he were ever hitched to a wagon. "No sir-ee; no such work as that for Blackie Bear," he said. "It is bad enough to have to hunt all over the woods for my dinner, and when it comes to having to pull a wagon to earn it—woof, woof. No!"

He kicked the breath out of Blackie.

So, one day after Blackie had been talking mighty big about what he would do and what he wouldn't do, he went out in the woods to hunt all by himself. After hunting for ever so long and not even finding a rabbit, he got pretty hungry and tired, and was just thinking that he would lie down and take a little nap and get rested, and then hunt some more, when he came up to the edge of the opening to look around, he saw a donkey standing near a wagon under a tree, and his head was down in a feed box while he was eating his dinner. Blackie looked all around to see if there was a man in sight, but there wasn't Down With Mr. Man's Dinner.

"That's a mighty little donkey," Blackie said to himself, "and I couldn't eat more than one ham, but I wouldn't mind having a good big dinner. But, oh, look; here's some dinner already fixed," he said, as he saw a big tin bucket hanging from a limb of a little tree close by the wagon. Blackie looked around again, but there wasn't a soul in sight but the donkey, and so he went over to the tree and stood on his hind legs and reached for the bucket.

Blackie thought Mr. Man must have gone off down to the spring to take a nap before dinner, instead of after dinner, as he always did, and so he slipped into the woods and sat down and ate all of Mr. Man's dinner in a mighty few minutes.

"Oh, I feel better now," he said to the dinner bucket, "and I believe I'll go and give that donkey a slap and run him out of the field. And if he wants to fight—well, I wonder how a donkey ham would taste, anyway."

Blackie Makes Mistake

And now look at Blackie making a bad mistake. Here he goes creeping up behind Hee-Haw Donkey, thinking that those big floppy ears are hanging down over his eyes so he can't see. But a donkey can smell a bear almost as well as a dog can, and Hee-Haw knew that Blackie was slipping up on him. And now just as Blackie was getting ready to say "Woof," and slap Hee-Haw, the donkey sang out "Hee-Haw" loud enough to be heard a mile, and then he slapped Blackie. Yes, sir; he kicked up both feet and hit Blackie right in the stomach so hard that he knocked all the breath and sense out of him, and Blackie fell over and lay there just like he was dead.

When Mr. Man heard his donkey scream so, he came running up from the spring, with his jug full of water, and when he saw that Blackie had eaten up all of his dinner and then tried to kill his donkey, he was awfully mad. "Well, anyway," he said, "I'll have a good bear-skin coat, and plenty of fresh meat," and he took out his knife, and began whetting it so it would be easy to take the skin off of Blackie.

Even so.. you can say Chesterfields are "not like others"

No two people in the world look alike . . . act alike. So it is with tobacco . . . just like folks.

No two leaves are the same.

Furthermore, not only are the tobaccos different, but the way the tobaccos are handled is different.

This, you can understand.

You know just as well as we do that no two manufacturers use the same kinds of tobaccos, or blend them or cross-blend them or weld them together in the same manner.

We do everything that science knows and that money can buy to make CHESTERFIELD as good a cigarette as can be made.

Restricted Purchasing for Tax Check Will Be Sought.

Amendments to the District liquor law to require tax stamps on all hard liquors and to require local retailers to purchase their stocks from local wholesalers will be drafted by Assistant Corporation Counsel Andrew Howsley at the direction of the House District Committee.

The purpose of the stamp amendment is to prevent tax evasion. Under the present system, liquor taxes are based on memoranda furnished by both wholesalers and retailers, and only check on sales is that obtained when inspectors visit the liquor establishments.

Howsley will make a study of the Maryland liquor law which requires that all retailers make their purchases from concerns holding State wholesalers' licenses.

The committee also instructed Howsley to prepare a repealer bill, which will eliminate from the liquor act the provision requiring that composition of all liquors be labeled on the bottle. This provision is surplusage, Howsley said, because the Federal Alcohol Control Administration requires this procedure.

Pharmacy Refused Permit.

The application of the Petworth Pharmacy for a license to dispense bottled liquors, which aroused spirited opposition on the part of school and civic leaders, was denied yesterday by the Liquor Control Board.

In its refusal, based on the fact that the store is 250 feet from Roosevelt High School, the board declared the "pharmacy has been conducted in a manner beyond reproach, and the character of those engaged in the business is likewise not questioned."

Benjamin Biallek, president of the company, declared he will appeal to the courts to compel the board to grant the permit. In his application, Biallek was willing to agree not to dispense any liquors during the hours in which school children frequented his establishment for lunch.

"The unanimous opinion of those who were interested in the schools," the board declared, "was to the effect that the issuance of the license would be harmful to the children. In a difficult question of this kind the board can only take the suggestion of those who are interested in the welfare of the pupil.

"Here, on the one hand, we find the possible effect on a large number of adolescent children, and on the other hand, we have the applicant to consider who suggests that his business will be very materially injured if he does not get the license."

First Formal Opinion.

The opinion of the board, which is the first formal opinion handed down under its recently enunciated policy of refusng licenses in the vicinity of schools, will probably serve as a precedent unless it is upset by the courts.

Prior to this decision, the board had refused a license to the Temple Luncheonette and Drug Store at Tenth and U streets northwest, because of its proximity to a school. There was no formal opinion in that case, which will also be brought into the courts in an attempt to compel issuance of the license.

Henry I. Quinn, who led the opposition to licensing in the vicinity of schools, yesterday expressed himself satisfied with the policy of the board, which is to deny all permits for consumption on the premises, where the applicant's place of business is within 400 feet of a school.

Because of the fight over the policy in these cases, more than 20 applications have been held in abeyance. Chairman Offutt said each will be heard separately, beginning next week.

3 Gunmen and Girl Fail to Abduct Waiter at Laurel.

Washington and Maryland police last night were on the lookout for three alleged gunmen and a girl who, they said, attempted to abduct a lunch car waiter at Laurel, Md.

Cassie Giordon, night waiter at the Laurel Diner, said a young man early yesterday entered the lunch car, drew a pistol and declared "you're coming with me."

Emmil Secondoorfh, a customer in the diner, fled through a side door to telephone police, Giordon said.

This, he said, frightened the man, who ran to an automobile waiting outside with two other men and a girl. They fled toward Washington, he reported.

State Policeman M. E. Katz, who answered the call, said he pursued the car to the District line. Giordon had never seen the quartet before.

Cat's Treed, But What Tree? Police Would Like to Know

The "Cat" has been treed—but no one seems to know just which tree.

The "Cat" was a notorious burglar, who several years ago terrorized fashionable Cleveland Park with a series of depredations. Little has been heard from him in many months—but now police say his identity is known and the trail is leading to imminent arrest.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, wasn't sure of the suspect's nickname. He claimed the "Cat" was not known by that name to police.

"We have under suspicion," he said, "a burglar known to have operated some time ago in the Cleveland Park section. He may be the so-called 'Cat.'"

A series of rumors followed disapearance of the "Cat." Many said he was caught and sentenced to the Lorton Reformatory. Others said he left town, and still others said he was killed during a gun battle.

The burglar operated in strange fashion. He would suddenly appear in a citizen's home, and then disappear again without attempting robbery. Only in a few cases did he escape with loot. A vigilantes' committee was formed, but the mysterious visits continued.

Witnesses, police say, are willing and ready to identify the "Cat," should he be arrested.

Mrs. J. S. Elliott Is Dead at 53; Noted Writer

Mrs. Elliott was a native Washingtonian, and began her writing career here. She was the daughter of Capt. Charles Joyce, of this city, and before her marriage in 1909 was prominent in newspaper and musical circles.

For some years she was dramatic and musical critic of the Washington Times, and later wrote a column from the Capital for the old New York World. She also was connected with the Washington bureau of the New York Herald Tribune, and contributed to magazines under the pen name of Daisy Joyce.

Mrs. Elliott was educated at Notre Dame Convent, Baltimore, where her daughter, Miss Joyce Elliott, now is a student.

Mrs. Elliott also is survived by her husband; a son, Jackson S. Elliott, and a sister, Miss Alice O. Joyce, of Washington. Funeral arangements have not been completed.

Deaf Women Win Lip Reading Test

Final Winners Awarded Trip to Richmond.

The annual lip-reading tournament, sporting event of the year for the Washington League for the Hard of Hearing, was held last night in the organization's clubrooms.

Perfect scores were made by Miss Frances Downes and Mrs. Margaret Neill. The elimination tournament, which was oral, resulted in a tie between Miss Downes, Mrs. T. M. Myers, Miss Minnie Hill and George Dickson.

Final winners in this competition were Miss Downes and Mrs. Myers, with Miss Hill as alternate. They will go to Richmond, April 7, to participate in a tri-city lip-reading tournament between Richmond, Baltimore and Washington.

Civic Groups Ask Airport Bill Be Sped

Representatives to Demand Early Hearing on Gibson Measure.

Representatives of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the Washington Board of Trade and the Washington Chamber of Commerce, will appear today before the Senate District Committee to request an early hearing on the Gibson bill providing an airport for the Capital.

Thomas T. Littlepage, of the Chamber of Commerce, will ask that a time be set for hearings on the bill which provides that Gravelly Point be developed as a public airport to replace present inadequate conditions at Washington-Hoover Airport.

T. S. Settle, secretary of the Park and Planning Commission and a representative of the Board of Trade, will also appear. The Board of Trade announced yesterday that Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, World War ace, will be a speaker before that body on Tuesday at the Mayflower Hotel.

The Exchange Club of Washington yesterday gave unanimous indorsement to the Gibson bill. Walter Hinton, pilot of the NC-4, first plane to cross the Atlantic, spoke in favor of the bill.

Phi Delta Theta Group Plans Banquet Tonight

Washington alumni of Phi Delta Theta, National college fraternity, will hold a banquet at the Carlton Hotel at 7:30 p. m. today in honor of the organization's founders.

William E. Lee, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, will be toastmaster. The fraternity was founded at Miami University in 1848. The entire chapter from the University of Maryland is expected.

Stealing Engine, Owning Fierce Dog, Penalized

A charge of "keeping a dog of fierce nature" cost V. J. Porkney, of Capitol Heights, Md., a fine of $10 and costs in the Hyattsville police court yesterday.

William Barrett, charged with stealing a motor from a truck belonging to Russell Lewis, of Tuxedo, Md., was sentenced to three months in the House of Correction.

Bride to Ask Parole Board Field Staff

Commissioners Indorse Work as Corporation Counsel.

Retiring Prosecutor to Join Van Doren Law Firm.

A staff of parole workers to investigate applications to the Parole Board will be asked by Corporation Counsel William W. Bride, who will relinquish his post tomorrow to E. Barrett Prettyman, and will then become chairman of the Parole Board.

Failure of the District Commissioners to act upon recommendations for a staff of workers was one of the reasons for the resignation of Dr. Loren B. T. Johnson, who declared the work being done, without help, was "perfectly useless and possibly harmful."

Commissioner George E. Allen has taken the position that the Parole Board agreed to submit recommendations to the corporation counsel to have legislation drafted which would authorize the appropriation of money for the use of the board, and these recommendations were never made.

To Take Oath Monday.

Bride declined to state fully what he plans to do when he takes his new position, which is an honorary post. He is not certain whether he will urge the appointments of psychiatrists to study applicants, as had been recommended by Dr. Johnson. Bride, who takes the place of Isaac Gans, recently appointed to the Liquor Control Board, and Wilbur La Roe, named to the position vacated by Dr. Johnson, will be sworn in on Monday.

In a letter to Mr. Bride yesterday the Commissioners paid tribute to his service as corporation counsel. The Commissioners said:

"At this time, upon the termination of your services to the District of Columbia as corporation counsel, the Commissioners desire to express to you their gratitude for the markedly faithful service you have rendered to the District.

"The Commissioners are cognizant of the quality of professional work you have done. Throughout your long tenure of office you have added greatly to the quality and maintained the efficiency of the important legal staff of your office.

His Skill Praised.

"You have given especial support to the Commissioners in composing the conflicting interests impinging upon proposed legislation. The substantial number of items in legislation engrossed in recent years is abundant evidence of your skill in this respect. While emphasis might be placed upon your work in the items just noted, it is equally true that all the duties assigned to you have been performed in a uniformly excellent way."

Dr. Johnson yesterday declared the reason the Parole Board has failed is because it has been unable to secure money for operation in spite of the fact that it saves the District $75,000 a year. After the board had demonstrated its usefulness, he said, no effort was made to secure an appropriation. No estimates were asked from the board, he said, as the board concluded its efforts to establish a model parole system were useless.

Bride announced yesterday that he has joined the law firm of Lucian H. Van Doren and Joseph Rafferty, with offices in the Southern Building. He plans to specialize in practice before Congress and Federal departments.

DESOLATED ROAD.

Down the path of least resistance we are toiling, day by day, to the poorhouse in the distance, to the poorhouse bleak and gray; everyone I know is banking on a place in that retreat, where the patrons sleep on planking, with no covers for their feet. Home and refuge of the beaten, stands the poorhouse in the dell, where the musty prunes are eaten, and the onions raise a smell. Everyone I know is talking of the journey sad and sore, every fellow says he's walking straightway to the poorhouse door. Here's a fellow fat and sassy, all dolled up in costly clothes, and his voice is loud and brassy as he talks about his woes; he has never known affliction, he has never missed a meal, but he tells, in frantic diction, how he's had a rotten deal. All misfortunes came to flout him, and to crease his marble brow; still he has a roll about him that would choke a mooley cow. He can buy all things he's needing, but, if you believe his tale, he is mournfully proceeding to the poorhouse in the vale. He has had financial croppers in the bitter recent years; now he'll join the other paupers in a carnival of tears. Oft I hear my neighbors speaking of this dismal poorhouse trail, while their money-belts are creaking with the weight of hoarded kale. Looking from my northeast gable I assure myself, at times, that the poorhouse is a fable, fit for Mother Goose's rhymes.

Sholl's Team Defeated, 56 to 19, in National A. A. U. Tournament

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

BILOXI, Miss., March 14 (Spl.).—Get a load of this:

"After starting a double play that retired the side in the ninth, Joe Cronin socked a homer with two Red Sox on base to beat Washington in the tenth."

This department is not suffering from the Biloxi sun, nor have I shaken a screw loose along the bumpy road back to the hotel. I am merely quoting what we all might have read had the Boston Red Sox not been so bankrupt in 1927 when Cronin was on the market.

As the saying goes, "The saddest words of tongue or pen, are those which say, it might have been." And it might have been Joe Cronin, of the Red Sox, instead of Joe Cronin, of the Nats, had the Boston Club been inclined to part with the modest sum of $3,500.

Narrow Escape, Follows.

Pat Monaghan, the wandering scout, who is in these parts looking for a job since the Giants rewarded him with his summary release after unearthing Shortstop Blondy Ryan, tells the story anent the narrow escape of Cronin from the Buffalo Club, for whom Monaghan was then working.

"I was beating the bushes around Kansas City and had been commissioned to find a shortstop, when I heard about Cronin," Monaghan related. "He couldn't hit a lick, but his two trials with Pittsburgh had taken a lot of the rough edge off him, and I recommended him to Boston.

"They couldn't see $3,500 for a shortstop who couldn't make good with the Pirates in two trials, and $3,500 was a lot of money to the Boston club then. After Kansas City found out I was interested, they boosted the price to $5,000 and Joe Engel brought Cronin to Washington the next week."

Cronin Real Bargain.

With a price tag of $5,000, Cronin takes rank with the foremost bargains in baseball. Of course, the daddy of all the purchases was Ty Cobb, whom the Tigers bought from Atlanta for the princely sum of $600. And then there was Sam Rice, who played 18 brilliant years for Washington after going to the Nats in settlement of a bad debt of $300.

Of the super stars of today, Cronin ranks with Jimmy Foxx and Lou Gehrig as the best American League bargains. Foxx and Gehrig, incidentally, did not cost the Athletics or the Yankees a solitary sou

Foxx was signed direct from his plow in Southern Maryland and Gehrig stepped out of Columbia University into the Yankee line-up, although he was seasoned briefly at Hartford.

In contrast, Lefty Grove cost Connie Mack $106,000; George Earnshaw cost him $60,000; Max Bishop, $75,000, and Al Simmons, $40,000, while the Yankees paid $125,000 for Ruth, $100,000 for Lary and Crosetti, and $100,000 for Lazzeri and Koenig.

From the same team from which he obtained Cronin for $5,000, Griffith obtained Joe Kuhel, the costliest Washington purchase, for $65,000.

Russell Showed Scout.

Jack Russell, the de luxe relief pitcher, today related how he made his entrance into the big leagues, despite himself, as it were.

"I knew that Steve O'Rourke was scouting me for the Boston Red Sox down in Texas, in 1925, but I didn't know why. I was pitching for the Paris Club, of the East Texas League, and had won 7 and lost 10. The day O'Rourke was watching me, I allowed 18 hits and was beaten, 10 to 9.

"The next day he signed me for the Red Sox. I thought it was a joke until I got orders the next spring to report to training camp."

Norfolk Golfers In Charleston Play

Harper and Kelly Compete in Open Tournament.

Norfolk, Va., March 14 (Spl.).—More than half a hundred golf stars, including Chandler Harper, Portsmouth youth, who holds the State amateur championship, and Johnny Kelly, Ocean View professional, gathered at Charleston, S. C., today to polish up their game in preparation for the opening round tomorrow of the annual Charleston open tournament.

In pretournament tests yesterday over the Wappoo course, the lowest reported score was registered by Harry Pezzula, of Providence, R. I., who tomorrow will make his first bow in professional ranks. Pezzula carded a 73, two over par.

Eight Walker Cuppers Named at St. Andrews

St. Andrews, Scotland, March 14 (U.P.).—The Royal and Ancient Golf Club championship committee today invited the following to play in the 1934 Walker Cup matches against the United States:

Michael Scott, captain; Harry G. Bentley, Eric W. Fiddian, Samuel L. McKinlay, Jack McLean, Cyril Tolley, T. A. Torrence and Roger H. Wethered. The remaining two places will be filled later. Three are newcomers to Walker Cup play—McKinlay and McLean, leading Scots amateurs, and Bentley, considered the best golfer in the mid...

ROBERT MICHELET.

Bob Michelet Mourned in Capital

Death of Young Athlete Source of Regret to Friends Here.

Never Changed His Way After Winning Fame, Coggins' Tribute.

THE death of Robert Michelet, the 22-year-old Washington boy—scholar and athlete—who passed away yesterday at Dartmouth, U., a victim of pneumonia, caused a wave of visible sorrow last night among Washington's scholastic and athletic circles. Seldom have members of the Capital's sporting ranks shown as genuine regret as that which arose in schools, homes and clubs throughout the city as the death of the popular young man became known.

Robert Michelet enjoyed a place unique in the hearts of those who knew him. Versed in the accomplishment of sport, successful in the rigors of the classroom, he was always regarded highly by those with whom he associated. The many honors which had been heaped upon him during the last few years of his short life had left his modest and unassuming manner unaffected, his attractive personality unchanged.

Friend of Coggins.

Among those who have had every opportunity to watch the young man since the days when he romped in knee trousers through the halls of Central High School till the days when he returned home from college last June, is Bert Coggins, athletic director at Central, and one of the boy's closest friends for more than ten years. Deeply affected as he recounted story after story showing the high character, the clean, full life and the athletic achievements of "Bob," as he called him, Mr. Coggins said he could not speak too highly of him.

"I had known Bob since he was in eighth grade. That was ten years ago," he reflected. "He stood out even then, not only with us in the athletic department, but with his teachers as well. I have never known a nicer kid. He was a fine, clean boy—frank and open—always with a good word for somebody else. Since his school days I have had Bob come to me and talk, as all boys like to do, about what they are doing at school and what they did when they were kids. In all the time I knew him, he never changed—and he had reason to, with all his honors."

Dog Trials Are Slated For Luray on Monday

Luray, Va., March 14 (Spl.).—Hundreds of sportsmen are expected in Luray next Monday, when the annual meeting of the Page Valley Field Trial Clubs will be held. Many setter and pointer dogs from Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia are expected to be put in the trials. The trials probably will be held on the M. A. Long farm near Luray. The trials have been held on the Long farm for the last four years.

Judges will be E. C. Meade, Richmond, president of the American Club, and C. B. Stickley, Vauculuse, president of the trial organization. Two stakes will be run, all-age and puppy trials. Winners in each stake will receive silver trophies; seconds, blue ribbons. G. H. Pollock, of Washington, is president of the club, with Dr. G. H. Long and J. R. Mims, Luray, vice presidents. H. G. Bradford, Luray, is secretary.

House Group Approves Racing

Horse Betting Backed, but Dog Events Are Ruled Out.

THE Black racing bill, amended to eliminate a provision for dog racing, was reported out of the House District Committee yesterday following a second airing of public sentiment on the measure. The measure as amended provides for establishment of a three-member racing commission to supervise the sport and legalizes horse racing with mutuel betting in the District. The bill had been returned from the District Commissioners with a recommendation for unfavorable action following a public hearing held by them last month.

The favorable report on the measure was made following a spirited discussion of the pros and cons, in which Arthur Clarendon Smith, representing the Federation of Business Men's Associations and the Central Business Men's Association, headed the pro and those opposed to the bill were headed by Arthur L. Winn, jr., acting for Wilbur La Roe, chairman of the committee on civic affairs of the Washington Federation of Churches.

Revenue Is Cited.

Among those advocating the measure was James E. Colliflower, president of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, who quoted statistics tending to prove that legalization of horse racing in Washington would add approximately $500,000 a year to District revenue and provide work and labor in the construction of a track and grand stand which would cost about $750,000. Among others in favor of the bill were Oscar B. Roberts, representing the Center Market dealers, John F. Costello, chairman of the Democratic National Committee for the District, Levi H. David, of the Benning Citizens Association, and A. J. Shipe, an attorney.

Among those opposing the measure were, besides Winn, the Rev. Thomas E. Boode, pastor of the Temple Baptist Church; the Rev. Henry N. Pringle, of the International Reform Bureau; the Rev. Augustus T. Murray, pastor of the Society of Friends; Canon William Chase, of the International Reform Bureau, and Thomas L. Gammell, of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association.

Fought by Federation.

Speaking for the Federation of Churches, Winn declared his organization was unequivocably opposed to racing in the District. He pointed out that residents of Kenilworth, through their citizens association, had already protested against it to the District Commissioners. Dr. Chase charged political machines supported and gained money from organized crime which was attracted to racing centers.

Following the hearing Wilbur La Roe, chairman of the committee on civic affairs of the Washington Federation of Churches, said:

"It has been shown before the District Commissioners that there is no public sentiment in favor of racing in the District. The bill was pushed through in an unfortunate railroading at a time when every effort is being expended to eliminate gambling in the District. The District Attorney is clamping down on gambling here, and there is no public sentiment in favor of it. We shall ask a public hearing before the Senate committee and are prepared to fight the measure then. We shall even carry the fight to the President, if necessary."

Fair Grounds Sprint Won by Chimney Sweep

New Orleans, March 14 (AP).—Mose Goldblatt's Chimney Sweep, once a top-notch performer for the late Harry Payne Whitney, ran 6 furlongs in 1:12 flat today to win the feature race on the Fair Grounds program.

Taking the lead at the halfway mark, after trailing in second place, the 7-year-old gelding opened up a commanding lead. He easily held his field safe in the stretch, crossing the finish line a length in front of Mrs. J. Diebold's Walter D. with Brustigert third in the field of seven.

With a none too consistent record for his last three starts, Chimney Sweep returned $10.80 for $2.

Infielders, Outfielders Begin Filtering Into Biloxi Today

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor, The Post).

BILOXI, Miss., March 14—With the quietude and stillness of the Nats training camp broken only by the clank of nickels in the lobby slot machines, the calm and serenity here continues apace, or words to that effect.

With Rookie Cecil Travis having yielded to the reporters his last drop of life blood as a topic for pieces in the paper during the past fortnight, and with holdouts Cliff Bolton, Heinie Manush and Joe Kuhel loudly reiterating their complete silence, the wild-eyed correspondents who have been threatening to bite a dog are now in a mood to contract the rabies, just to make the picture complete.

Manager Joe Cronin, and Owner Clark Griffith are at fault for the reporters' plight. Their stand-pat attitude on the make up of their 1934 ball club has reduced the scope of topics to reminiscences. The quality of the rookies in camp at this writing is so negligible that they are being flattered by the telegraph tolls, and if one more word is written in praise of Travis, the guy will be in a position to sue for breach of promise.

Alleviation Is Near.

The situation doubtless will be alleviated by tomorrow and Friday when the regular infielders and outfielders filter in and Kuhel and Manush take a stand on the salary question. The first baseman has evinced that he has no intentions of reporting unless granted a $3,000 increase, more than half of which has already been proffered.

Manush, despite his balky attitude on a contract that carries the same wage stipulations as in 1933, is expected to be more susceptible to Griffith's persuasive powers, especially when Griff closets him in the hotel, half asphyxiates him with a vile cigar and shoves the fountain pen in his hand.

But, otherwise, matters at camp are pursuing the even tenor of their way, and, believe me, it's even. The most sensational development of late is the continued soreness in Pitcher Ed Chapman's back, which is downright startling, if you get what I mean.

Regrets Out of Order.

Even the Biloxi Chamber of Commerce, which used to be good for an item or two daily, has ceased to offer its regrets for the uncommon chill in the Gulf Coast weather, which, we are told, is very unusual.

Rover Boy Cronin, whose conception of a startling statement is that "Everything is going fine," was downright vitriolic at the end of this morning's practice, when he fearlessly announced that "everybody is working like a beaver."

That reminds me that quite the hardest working fellow in this here camp is a man whose position is probably the most secure on the team. I mean Earl Whitehill. The first out on the field and the last off it is Whitehill, who has gone about the shedding of weight systematically. Whitehill has replaced Fred Marberry as the man who likes his base hits best.

The veteran southpaw, who has both temper and temperament, shows it both in the box and at the bat. He hates even to see his pitchers socked in batting practice and gives the rookies a lese-majeste look when they connect with even his spring training ball. But his joy is complete whenever he gets a solid smack up there at the plate.

Radonovich Pitches.

Cronin tipped off his hand anent the rookie pitchers during the last two days when he summoned Radonovich for batting practice, of which no other rookie hurler of the second flight was allowed to partake. Young Radonovich, small as pitchers go, has excellent action on the mound and the significance of his turns at bat during the last two practice sessions is apparently great.

The cards are stacked against Radonovich as far as a place on the regular staff is concerned, but he is in a fair way toward being placed with a minor league club, an ambition that probably no other of the half dozen third-class rookies will realize.

With Hal McKain having retired from baseball, the fight for the three more or less honorary berths on the Washington pitching staff of nine has simmered down to five fellows—Ray Prim, Bobby Burke, Ed Linke, Ed Chapman and Alec McColl. Which reminds me of my physics prof's crack that no two objects can occupy the same place at the same time.

Young Corbett, Hurt Over Eye, Cancels Bout

Sacramento, Calif., March 14 (AP).—Young Corbett, who was matched to fight Young Terry in San Francisco March 26, has canceled the match because of a cut over his left eye.

At the California Highway Patrol Training School here today he said that while boxing with a patrolman their heads came together and a cut over his eye that necessitated three stitches was the result.

American Final Assured in Net Play

Mangin Beats Merlin, Last Foreigner; Wood, Stoefen and Shields Win.

NEW YORK, March 14 (AP).—Four of America's first-flight tennis artists—three from the East and one from the West—successfully stroked their way today to the semifinals in the United States indoor championships on the Seventh Regiment Armory courts.

The four survivors from a starting field of 64 were Gregory S. Mangin, champion for the past two years and Nationally ranked at No. 5; Frank X. Shields, top-ranking in the Nation; Lester R. Stoefen, of Los Angeles, ranked at No. 3, and Sidney B. Wood, jr., sixth ranking American.

Brilliant tennis enabled Mangin to sweep from the championship Andre Merlin, French indoor champion, and remove the last of four foreign threats to his indoor dynasty.

Mangin's deft half-volley placements just over the cord at sharp, ungettable angles, served as the spearhead of his attack on the 22-year-old Frenchman who submitted in straight sets, 6—2, 6—3, 6—4.

Bowden Is Defeated.

Wood took the measure of Frank J. Bowden, former Columbia University captain, who registered an upset yesterday in his defeat of Jean Borota, kingpin of France's amateurs. Bowden went down fighting. The score was 6—4, 12—10, 6—4. Wood will meet Mangin tomorrow.

The fourth-round winners in the upper half of the draw—Stoefen and Shields—will bring together in the semifinals two of the biggest men in the sport.

The towering Stoefen, playing with all his might and an eye on a place on the U. S. Davis Cup squad, smothered the veteran George M. Lott, jr., Chicago, in straight sets, 6—1, 6—1, 6—4. Every branch of Stoefen's game was working at par and his backhand shots to the corners of the base line had Lott guessing.

Shields, just an inch or so shorter than the 6-foot inches Californian, defeated Dr. Eugene McCauliff with the loss of but five games in three sets. The score was 6—1, 6—1, 6—3.

In the only doubles match of today, Dr. Lawrence Kurzrok and J. H. Pitman, New York, defeated Borotra and Boussus, 6—8, 7—5, 13—11, and advanced to the third round.

Marshall Will Manage Winchester Park Nine

Winchester, Va., March 14 (Spl.).—Peyton J. Marshall, former athletic coach at Shenandoah Valley Academy here, has been selected by the Winchester Park Association to manage its baseball team this season.

Marshall, a former 16-letter man at Virginia Military Institute, Lexington, was the unanimous choice of the organization. He will have as his assistant, W. A. ("Sandy") Baker, former University of Virginia baseball player, who is now city treasurer here. H. Russell Potts will be business manager.

"Brother Act" Mat Feature Tonight

By Frank H. Young.

ONCE upon a time, there was a butcher in a small town in Omaha, whose name was Hason. As his business grew, so did his family, and he soon had seven sons. There did not seem to be much entertainment for the youngsters in those days, so they amused themselves by knocking each other about, tearing each other's muscles, bending each other's bones, knocking out each other's teeth, and otherwise battling each other as brothers are wont to do in all happy families.

Finally the modern game of rassling came about and the boys suddenly discovered that they were practically in business—and that they could get paid for the very stuff they had been giving away for years under the name of play. First, Rudy, the oldest, decided to turn his ability as an agony doler into a dividend payer. He had quite an argument with himself as to what name he could use, figuring that Hason sounded too much like he was a Turk, or something. Finally, he remembered the name of his next-door neighbor, adopted it for professional purposes, and that's how Dusek became a household name in the game of grunt and growl.

Three Here Tonight.

It was in 1921 that Rudy Dusek made his debut and he will perform in his ump-teenth hundredth bout in the feature of the card at the Auditorium tonight. And, for the first time on the same program here, two of his brothers also are listed. Ernie earns the spot in the semifinal, while Emil shows in the main preliminary. And, oddly enough, these three are the only ones of the bunch who use Dusek as their nom de mat, for Frank, Joe, Ned and Walter use the family name of Hason.

Rudy and Ernie, both rough and tough, meet equally rough and tough foes tonight, and either, or both, stand a fine chance of being upset. Against the older Dusek will be pitted one Joe Malcewicz, called the Utica Panther. The Panther is even more of a veteran than is Rudy, but Father Time has dealt lightly with him, he is still lightning-fast, can slug and take it with the best of them, and is scientific besides. This looms as the best bout booked locally in some time, unless one considers Ernie's listed tussle with Jumping Joe Savoldi, the reformed Notre Dame gridman, in the secondary feature on the same card.

Ernie vs. Savoldi.

Savoldi, free to use his famous drop-kick here, is a match for any man, and Ernie and he should have the rassle addicts standing up in their chairs and tearing their hair from excitement. Savoldi took Jimmy Londos' crown away from him some time back; that is, he held it overnight, but the National Boxing Commission early the next morning awakened to the fact that Londos was declared loser while outside of the ring, and rather quickly, too, and so Jumping Joe was quickly unfrocked. He dotes on speed and usually has his foes dizzy, if not altogether out, before the finish.

Emil's task should not be particularly hard, for he takes on a good trial horse who invariably finishes second, in Marshall Blackstock. The latter is rough, but not quite rough enough to better a better-than-ordinary performer.

Completing the "Duesk Night" card will be bouts between Sammy Stein and Lee Collins, the unmasked marvel, and Hans Steinke and barefooted Scotty McDougall.

Olympic Club Triumphs Easily

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 14 (Spl.).—Sholl's Cafe, of Washington, D. C., was eliminated by the Olympic Club, of Los Angeles, in the National A. A. U. tournament here this afternoon, the Californians winning by a score of 56 to 19.

The loss of Hal Kiesel early in the fray spelled disaster for the plucky National Capital quintet. Kiesel injured his ankle and was obliged to retire from action. Sholl's not only missed the lanky tip-off artist's scoring punch, but was seriously handicapped defensively by his absence. Frank Lubin, Olympic center, took advantage of the opposition's misfortune to ring up 29 points, a new individual scoring record for the tournament.

Lubin pumped them in from all angles, scoring seven field goals in the first half, which ended with the eventual winners on the long end of a 22-to-11 score. Carroll Shore, aggressive Sholl's guard, was the only player seemingly not affected by the Californians' unusual height and he played brilliantly, though for a losing cause.

Every member of the Olympic squad got into action and one combination seemed to be as effective as another.

Three Captains Named at V. M. I.

New Court, Ring and Mat Leaders Are Elected.

Lexington, Va., March 14 (AP).—V. M. I., monogram men today elected three varsity winter sports captains for next season.

They are: Basket ball, W. T. Downey, Richmond; boxing, Custis Burton, Hopewell; westling, W. W. Currence, Clarksburg, W. Va.

Bill Downey, great floorman and long-shot expert, played guard and forward during the season just closed, and landed the all-State and second all-conference tournament guard berths.

Burton, a scrappy welterweight, broke even against six tough opponents in the regular season.

Bill Currence, 155-pound grappler, had a great season, going through the regular season and the conference meet without defeat, and winning a majority of his bouts by falls.

The freshmen athletes elected their captains at the end of the season, the honors going as follows: Basket ball, Bruce Pendleton, guard, South Boston; boxing, Drake Pritchett, welterweight, Danville, and wrestling, Bill Dean, 155-pounder, Roanoke Rapids, N. C.

Seven Clubs Post League Forfeits

Potomac Valley Session Is Held in Cumberland.

Cumberland, Md., March 14 (Spl.).—Assurances that at least seven teams will be sure starters in the Potomac Valley Baseball League was received last night when representatives of that many clubs posted forfeits of $15 each at a league meeting held in the City Hall. Clarence Schafer presided.

Two newcomers, Vale Summit, also known as Pompey, which was represented in the Allegany County League last season, and the Celanese Spinners were among the teams to post forfeits. The holdover teams in the circuit are Allegany, Ellerslie, Ridgeley, East Side (Cumberland) and Centerville, Pa.

Vale Summit, represented by T. J. Higgins, took the place formerly occupied by Crystal Park, which announced its withdrawal because of the inability to line up a strong enough team.

Tilden, Vines to Play Frenchmen at Baltimore

With the French Ambassador a probable spectator, Henri Cochet and Martin Plaa, French tennis professionals, will put extra zest into their matches with Bill Tilden and Ellsworth Vines in Carlin's Park, Baltimore, Sunday and Monday nights.

Quel Jeu 2d, Overtaken Near End

Live One FinishesThird; Wright, Upon Victor, Scores Double.

Militia Is Triumphant; Herowin Wins Fifth, Pays $23.20.

HIALEAH PARK, March 14 (AP).—Hal Price Headley's 5-year-old Big Beau, under the feathery package of 105 pounds, sprang an upset here this afternoon when he earned his first purse of the year in the Tavares handicap of 1 mile. Running the 8 furlongs in 1:36 1-5, the Westerner registered by a half length at odds of 8 to 1. The Arden Farms' Quel Jeu took the place by a length from M. J. Sansone's live one. Wayne Wright rang up a riding double astride the surprise winner.

Quel Jeu recently was awarded first money after the stewards disqualified Monel, which won by a narrow margin in the new track record time of 1:35 3-5. Live One, a plater, which has been running for $3,000 and less, pulled a big surprise by beating the Greentree Star, Curacao, by three lengths for the show. Curacao holds a recent victory over Blessed Event.

Quel Jeu Takes Lead.

Quel Jeu was last away in the field of five, but Meade shot him into the lead entering the backstretch. Big Beau, showing more early speed than usual, forced the pace but could not threaten seriously until straightened out in the home lane. Wright rode the son of Supremus hard, and added weight told on Quel Jeu in the last furlong. Live One easily disposed of Curacao in the final quarter mile.

Phantom Legion, a plater that seems to have soured on racing, was made a strong favorite in the opening dash, and as on a recent occasion, refused to break. The stewards ordered the gelding barred for the remainder of the meeting after today's event. Victory in the mile test went to Militia, which came from off the pace to beat Dunfern by a head at the wire, returning $13.90. My Kentucky closed a big gap to take the show, a half-length behind.

Mannerism Scores.

The seventh and last of the "helpful purses," the net mutuel proceeds of which races go to greater Miami charity, was second on the card and was won by Mannerism, which came right back off a good race the previous day to score by a half-length. Integrity, favorite, was far before Young John for the place. Mannerism took the lead in the first quarter-mile and held on gamely when Integrity made a strong but futile stretch bid.

Hope Eternal, backed down $5.40 for $2, had to be plenty game to account for the third purse. The 4-year-old daughter of Eternal Broke slowly and ran over the leaders in a flashy display of speed and courage, nosing out Ever True in the last jump. The latter beat Distracting a half-length for second money.

Chief A Triumphs.

Silvio Coucci gave the $9 for $2 shot, Chief A, one of his strongest rides to land on top in the 6 furlongs of the forth number. The Bronx Express rode out his mount to win by two lengths from Vishnu, the choice. Singing Heart overcame early trouble and closed very fast to be third, a length and a half farther back.

J. E. Smallman's 3-year-old, Herowin, found a field he could beat with the running of the fifth event, a 6-furlong dash for horses of his age. A trailer in the early running, Herowin began to move up fast at the head of the stretch. With the leaders feeling the effects of a dizzy pace, Herowin swept to the front in the last few yards. Although he only won by a half length, Wayne Wright had his mount well in hand in the fast time of 1:11. Happy Go, considered a standout, was outrun by Chance Line until the final drive, when Chance Line weakened and lost the place by a length. Herowin paid $23.20.

Impeach, a gelding that is exceptionally fond of the turf course, made it two in a row on the grass track and established a new track record of 1:44 3-5 for one mile and a sixteenth in annexing the seventh purse by a half length. Xerseise was a like distance before Fingal for the place. Impeach caught O'Neill early and never was headed although Xerseise made the winner give his best. Impeach returned $22.80. Spartan Lady had the worst of a bad start.

Renaissance Five To Oppose Rinaldi

The Renaissance quintet, of New York, colored professional court champions, will meet the Rinaldi Tailors at the Lincoln Colonnade, 1215 U street northwest, Friday of next week, affording the sport-loving public a chance to see how the team that defeated the Heurich Brewers last Sunday stocks up against a powerful opponent.

The Rens will present the same line-up as met the Original Celtics at the Washington Auditorium last winter, including "Fats" Jenkins, Eyre Saitch, "Tarzan" Cooper, "Pappy" Ricks, Bill Yancey and "Wee Willie" Smith.

"Tubbs Farrell," "Jake" Goldblatt, Ralph Bennie, Dick Streets, Joe Sweency and others will make up the Rinaldi aggregation. The management will install 16 rows of circus seats in the Colonnade Auditorium to boost the seating capacity of 1,200. There will be a preliminary contest at 8:30.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

The discovery of gold in California in 1848—a discovery that started the historic gold rush of '49—profited many men untold millions, but the one man who made the discovery failed to share the wealth. He, James W. Marshall, died broke 37 years later near the site of his discovery.

Marshall, who was a mill overseer for Capt. John Sutter, at Colma, Calif., first found gold in the mill-race on January 24, 1848. He confided in his employer, and both he and Sutter agreed to keep it in confidence until they could profit by the discovery. Somehow, however, the news leaked out and treasure hunters from all over the world flocked to California in search of gold.

Neither Marshall nor Sutter shared in the profits. Prospectors and miners immediately moved in on Sutter's estate, crowding even the owner off his own property. All he ever got for it was an annual pension of $3,000 from the California Legislature, which in a small way paid him for the loss of his potential fortune. Sutter moved to Pennsylvania in 1873 where he lived until his death seven years later.

The strange hotel shown above is 15 stories high, yet it has only one long corridor which, without steps, leads to all rooms. The spiral ramp which is the corridor, makes 15 complete turns from the ground to the top—there are 15 rooms on each turn, no two of which are on the same level.

Hialeah Race Track, March 14.

Dear Al:

Boy, oh, boy! Bill Bennings' best bet was Big Beau, and just like Butter Beans last week, the combination just couldn't miss. Big Beau sailed home at an $18 mutuel, right behind Herowin's winning effort at $23.20, which made it a pretty fair day for Bennings, Inc., particularly at a time when most of the selectors were looking in the dictionary to see if there really was a word like "winner." Jockey Wright rode both of my successes and I'm duly grateful to him. Mike wants full credit for each of them, but I can only credit him with an assist. Pardon me for bringing it up, but didn't I mention that the get-away specials were in the offing? And not a favorite got home in front.

BILL.

First race—Pass appears best fitted by the opening sprint. He might have won last out but for a rough trip. A smooth ride tomorrow will give us a winner here. Bernie K. showed a lot of speed the other day and will be ready to battle the top one. Shuffle Off for the show.

Second race—Little Dinah goes for the Bennnigs interests again tomorrow, but we can not expect a $100 mutuel. This daughter of Dinah Did Upset is as keen a miss as I've seen in a long time. Happy Helen and Gay Music to complete the money picture.

Third race—Sequoia has been whispered to me as a youngster ready to win at 6 furlongs. I'm taking Mike's good thing, Waterset, for the place. Distribute, a likely favorite, to complete the money picture.

Fourth race—You can take it or leave it, but Dornoch goes for the Bennings marbles in this. The former Charles Town sprint king is as sharp as a tack now and ready to defeat this kind. Transen is due to do some running and gets the place call ahead of Style Corner.

Fifth race—I'm going to take the lightly weighted Pass Shot to lead this field to the wire. Judge Schilling and Mountain Elk have speed but I believe the top one can outhoof them.

Sixth race—Scout Master came through with a sizzling effort the other day and may have enough pep tomorrow to hang a defeat on Drombo. Dark Conquest figures to be in the thick of the fight.

Seventh race—Lone Hand, Come On and Elizabeth Fox is the way I place them in the final. The last-named gets in with a feather impost and is a possible surprise.

MILITIA worked his way up, came to the outside entering stretch, closed gamely and won in last stride. DUNFERN got away well, followed pace closely and ran good race. MY KENTUCKY finished fast on the outside. BUN D. made a game effort. DARK FEY displayed keen speed for 7 furlongs then tired. He is sure to improve. PHANTOM LEGION very rank and refused to break. He was left.

SECOND RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, 700; claiming price, $1,200; "the Hopeful." For 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 2:48½. Off at 2:51. Winner, C. Moss, b. g. (5), by Westy Hogan—Affection. Trainer, same. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:37 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MANNERISM, $12.70, $5.10, $3.10; INTEGRITY, $3.30; $2.50; YOUNG JOHN, $3.60.

MANNERISM, running back to his recent good race, ran into lead turning out of back stretch, opened wide gap and held on gamely. INTEGRITY moved up very fast in stretch and was wearing the winner down. YOUNG JOHN got away fast, displayed good speed and just lasted to save the show. BALTHASAR had no mishap. RESISTING ran good race and should improve over this effort.

THIRD RACE—Three furlongs. Nursery course (straightaway). Purse, $700; claiming, $3,000 to $2,500. For 2-year-old fillies. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post, 3:15. Off at 3:20½. Stock Prices Change Little; Preferred Up

New York, March 14 (AP).—Preferred stocks were the chief movers in the stock market today. Their direction was upward.

Common stocks loitered through an uninteresting and generally featurless session. Rails extended their recent gains by fractions to a couple of points at the best, but edged back when other groups failed to follow.

Final price changes were mostly fractional, with gains and losses so well divided that the averages closed unchanged. Turnover was 1,400,869 shares.

Traders Still Cautious.

Although the market had a firm undertone, traders seemed unwilling to venture far from the sidelines pending clarification of labor and other problems. The Senate's rejection of the St. Lawrence treaty may have had something to do with demand for steam railroad shares and the fairly firm appearance of light and power industry listings.

Some of the aviation stocks improved, Douglas being especially busy. Motors were disposed to do better at times, presumably on the theory that the proposed increase in wages and reduction of hours would facilitate adjustment of current difficulties in sections of that industry.

Some chain store stocks improved quietly as more recent statistics on sales trickled in; these showed the expected gains over a year ago. Among inactive shares Pacific Coast Co., issues strengthened. New York City tractions looked up. American Telephone, ex-dividend $2.25, was firm. Steels were somewhat uneven, U. S. Steel losing nearly a point net.

Comments on Steel.

Midweek trade reports included the Iron Age comment on the steel industry. Estimating current production at 48½ per cent against 49 per cent a week ago, the review said demand from automotive consumers had been checked by "fear of labor troubles."

Evidence of increased caution, it found, was also visible in other directions, but farm equipment makers and producers of containers have been able to expand output. The review thought the steel industry seemed disposed to increase wages if it could advance prices to cover the higher costs.

The Pennsylvania and New York Central Railroads had larger loadings of freight last week, which strengthened expectations that some improvement over the previous week would be shown when the aggregate figures are assembled.

Power Production Off.

Electric power production was off slightly, but the rise over 1933 was vigorous, the comparison being with an unusually quiet week.

Frequently speculative holdings of stocks are sold to raise funds for income tax payments, but little of that has been noted this quarter.

Money markets were lethargic, and little change in their situation is anticipated over the midmonth period.

By Ralph West Robey.

Four weeks ago I commented here upon the rapidly increasing volume of Government obligations being purchased by the commercial banks. To give definiteness to the discussion, and to make it as nearly up to date as possible, the figures of the "reporting member banks" were used as more or less typical for the banking system. These banks are located in 91 of our leading cities and their assets compose some 40 per cent, or better, of the total resources of our entire commercial banking system.

At that time—the figures were as of February 7—these reporting member banks held $865,000,000 more Government obligations than they had a year earlier. It was noted, too, that of the four categories into which the portfolios of the reporting banks are divided in the weekly statement, namely, loans on securities, other loans, United States Government securities, and other securities, only this one division showed an increase over the figure for a year earlier. Loans on securities had declined $109,000,000; other loans $237,000,000, and other than Government securities $59,000,000.

Two Major Changes Have Occurred in Last Month.

During the intervening four weeks, or to March 7, there have been two major changes in the portfolios. The first of these is an increase in the volume of other than loans on securities—or the category that includes ordinary business loans. Week before last this item showed for the first time in many months a larger figure than on the corresponding date a year earlier. This relationship with the earlier date also has been continued for the week of March 7.

This apparent improvement, however, is mere statistical fiction. It arises solely from the fact that in the corresponding weeks a year ago, because of the strain upon the banking system, there was a rapid decline in the volume of such loans outstanding. Thus, from $5,007,000,000 on February 15, they dropped to $4,807,000,000 a week later and to $4,554,000,000 on March 1. The result is that although the current figure shows an improvement over a year ago, the actual volume of such credit outstanding is less than in recent weeks.

This change, however, is far less important than the other one that stands out so sharply in the current statement. As mentioned above, a month ago the holding of Government obligations was $865,000,000 more than it had been a year earlier. It now is $1,851,000,000 larger than it was in the corresponding week of 1933.

Changes Last Year Do Not Offset the Increase.

Further, this change in the holding of Government obligations cannot be explained away by a sudden shift in this item in bank portfolios a year ago. It is true, of course, that during the banking crisis Government obligations were sold in large volume, the decline in the portfolios of the banks in question being $507,000,000 between February 15 and March 8, of last year, but the increase far more than offsets this. Specifically, the holding of governments by these banks on the last available date, March 7, was $6,278,000,000. A year ago it was only $4,427,000,000.

What this amounts to perhaps may be expressed more clearly by thinking of it in connection with the total loans and investments of these banks. On March 8, 1933, Government obligations composed 28 per cent of the total portfolio. On March 7, 1934, they composed 36 per cent—an increase in the proportion of over a quarter.

A year ago the holding of governments amounted to 53 per cent of the total loans of these banks. Today it amounts to 77 per cent.

Such a trend in portfolios does not add to the safety of our banking system nor to its ability to confer benefits upon society as a whole.

Curb Trading Turns Quiet In All Groups

Utilities and Specialties Make Advances; Transfers Total 278,000.

New York, March 14 (AP).—Utilities and specialties advanced moderately on the curb exchange today. All groups, however, did not follow, and final quotations among oils, metals and alcohols were marked by minor irregularity.

Activity was at the recent quiet pace, transfers which approximated 278,000 were about the same as the day previous. Fluctuations generally were narrow throughout. The list performed better during the forenoon, and light offerings appearing in the last hour were scattered.

Davenport Hosiery reacted a point after a large run-up yesterday. Similar recessions were shown by Newmont, New Jersey Zinc, Gulf Oil, Waco Aircraft and Standard Oil of Ohio. Hiram Walker and Fisk Rubber yielded fractionally.

U. S.-Canadian Wheat Exports Rise in Week

New York, March 14.—Exports of wheat (including flour as wheat) from United States and Canadian ports, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., for the week ended March 4, 1934, totaled 4,451,617 bushels, as compared with 3,122,133 bushels in the previous week and 4,228,376 bushels in the corresponding week of last year. For the season, July 1 to date, wheat exports aggregated 142,313,170 bushels, as against 209,042,059 bushels for the same period a year ago.

Corn exports for this week were 9,000 bushels, compared with 75,000 bushels in the preceding week and 157,000 bushels last year. For the season, corn exports totaled 483,000 bushels, as against 4,588,742 bushels for the like period in the previous year.

Sugar Refinery Net Rises to $4,801,574

New York, March 14 (AP).—Net profit of the American Sugar Refining Co. in 1933 amounted to $4,801,574, equal to $3.67 a common share, Earl D. Babst, chairman of the board, reported to stockholders today. This compares with net income of $4,504,408, or $3.01 a share in 1932.

"Tariff protection for United States sugar refiners is urgently needed to stem the tide of refined sugar flowing into this country," Mr. Babst stated in his report. He listed total imports of 1933 as 1,403,579,520 pounds, "enough to supply the needs of 15,000,000 Americans."

The Ohio Oil Co. and subsidiaries report net loss of $130,016 for 1933 after charges, compared with net profit of $7,242,981 in 1932. The last half of the year resulted in net profit of $3,003,158. There was a loss of $3,133,174 in the half ending June 30.

Amalgamated Leather Companies, Inc., today declared a dividend of 50 cents a share on the preferred stock, the first payment since 1920 when the $7 annual rate on the old $100 par value shares was discontinued. The present stock is of $50 par value. The dividend is payable March 23 to stock of record April 1.

American District Telephone Co. of New Jersey today declared a regular quarterly dividend of $1 on the common stock, about 75 per cent of which is owned by Western Union Telegraph Co. The dividend is payable April 15 to holdings of record March 15.

Lerner Stores Corporation declared a dividend of $1.62½ on the 6½ per cent cumulative preferred stock, payable March 24 to stock of record March 19. The last previous payment was $1.62½ on April 30, 1932.

The Erie Railroad's report for 1933 shows that the road borrowed $4,030,000 from the Railroad Credit Corporation. The last loan, $1,500,000, was obtained on May 1 and the remainder in 1932. The corporation was formed to administer a loan pool financed through freight surcharges effective from January 2, 1932, to March 31, 1933. The Erie earned $2,174,744 from the surcharges.

Wool Market.

(U. S. Department of Agriculture.)

Boston, March 14 (A.P.).—A very small number of houses transacted business on wool. The finer grades of Western-grown wool received the bulk of the call. A small quantity of strictly combing 64s and finer staple territory wool moved at 86@88 cents scoured basis. The bulk of the demand, however, ran to the shorter staple of this grade at around 80 cents scoured basis for clothing and at 81@82 cents for short French combing.

Bond Market Again Captures Record High

Corporate and Government Issues Lead; Trading, $19,476,000.

New York, March 14 (AP).—Continued demand for corporate and U. S. Government bonds again pushed prices up briskly today in the loans market.

The average for 60 domestic industrial, rail and utility issues advanced ½ point to 85.7, another new peak since 1931. Transfers totaled $19,476,000, par value, the largest aggregate since February 16.

Traders and investors apparently paid little attention to the labor hearings at Washington, where efforts were being made to settle the automobile strike problem, to a slight dip in steel production and to the hesitancy of stocks.

Further Trade Advance.

The opinion was general that there would be little interruption to the business advance. Estimates were also made of a slightly more than seasonal advance in carloadings. Compared with the "depression low" period of last year, electric light output established a record weekly increase.

Some of the power company loans were also aided by the defeat of the St. Lawrence waterway treaty in the Senate.

Certificates of the new American Waterworks 5s appeared for the first time on the list at prices ranging from 107¼ to 107¾. They were quite active.

Among Lively Gainers.

Among the livelier gainers of fractions to 2 or more points were some bonds of Alleghany Corporation, Central Pacific, Chesapeake Corporation, Chesapeake & Ohio, Chicago & Northwestern, Columbia Gas, Denver & Rio Grande, Florida East Coast, Goodyear, International Hydroelectric, International Mercantile Marine, Manhattan Railway, Louisville & Nashville, National Dairy, Paramount, Pennsylvania, Postal Telegraph, Southern Railway, Texas & Pacific, Burlington, United Drug, U. S. Rubber, Virginia Railway and Youngstown Sheet & Tube.

Wheeling & Lake Erie 4½s advanced 9 points on a sale of 39 bonds.

Federal Loans Up.

Most of the Treasury securities edged up 1-32 to 5-32 of a points to new highs for the year. Liberty 3½s also made a new 1934 top with a gain of 10-32 of a point at 103.1.

This issue must be called tomorrow if the Government desires to redeem it on June 15. Liberty first 4¼s eased 7-32 of a point.

These bonds, if they are to be redeemed at mid-June, would have to be called tomorrow.

Foreign obligations were without any particular interest. The Germans were irregular, but Belgian and French obligations improved.

Norfolk & Western's Passenger Trade Rises

Roanoke, Va., March 14 (Spl.).—The Norfolk & Western Railway Co. experienced its first increase in passenger business last year that it has enjoyed in the past decade, according to figures announced by John L. Bladon, general passenger traffic manager. The increase amounted to 74,922 passengers, or 9.66 per cent over the 1932 figures.

Reduction in rates was said by Mr. Bladon to be the primary cause for the increase but other factors were said to be improved economic conditions and unfavorable weather conditions of the last month when passengers moved by the railway totaled 58,444 as compared with 32,546 in February, 1933.

Cotton Turns Irregular in Quiet Market

March Closes at 12.15 as Market Is Steady at 1 Point Up to 5 Down.

New York, March 14 (AP).—Cotton fluctuated irregularly today in a quiet market. Differences narrowed somewhat on trade support in the near months and speculative liquidation of later positions. July contracts sold off from 12.39 to 12.30 and closed at 12.34, with the general market closing steady, 1 point higher to 5 points lower.

Liverpool cables were relatively steady but early trade and commission house buying was offset by some Southern, Liverpool and wire house selling. During the morning moderate mid-month trade price fixing brought in a little scattered buying, causing the prices to rally to net gains of 2 to 6 points in the more active positions.

Absence of stimulating news with respect to the Bankhead bill appeared to bring in liquidation late in the session when the market established new lows for the day.

May Contracts Drop.

May sold off from 12.30 to 12.20 and October from 12.55 to 12.45, involving losses of 3 to 7 points for the list.

The Census Bureau report on domestic consumption for February of 477,890 bales against 508,034 in January and 441,203 in February last year was in line with trade expectations.

Southern Hedging Cause.

Part of the late selling in the distant months was credited to Southern hedging and also to liquidation of speculative account.

Exports today 26,164, making 5,872,813 so far this season. Port receipts, 7,333. U. S. port stocks, 3,234,362.

Fluctuations were confined to a range of 10 points. Aside from legislative uncertainties, buying was checked by the quiet of the cotton goods markets. However, there was said to be little disposition to sell in view of reports of generally firm conditions in the Southern spot markets.

Local spot interests said that reports of moderate offerings in the interior in a few instances at slight concessions had not affected the basis, which held firm.

The apparent discount of March under October contracts had narrowed from 37 to 32 points on the basis of the closing quotations of the past two days. Liverpool cables reported that market featureless pending developments from the United States.

German Use Of Cigarettes Is Gaining

Cigarette consumption in Germany, which had been declining in 1931 and 1932, registered a notable increase in the 1932-33 fiscal year, according to a report from Consul W. A. Leonard, Bremen, made public by the Commerce Department.

The total number of cigarettes sold in this period was 31,715,000,000, a figure 13 per cent in excess of that of the preceding fiscal year. In recent years, the report shows, there has been a gradual decline in the number of cigarette factories in Germany. During 1932-33 there were 211 factories operating as against 219 in the preceding fiscal year. Latest available production figures, covering 1931-32, show that the total output in that period amounted to 28,664,300,000 cigarettes.

Germany's foreign trade in cigarettes is of very minor importance, the report shows. Practically all of the imports originate in the Saar district.

Consumption of raw cigarette tobacco in Germany during 1932-33 amounted to nearly 80,000,000 pounds, an increase of 14 per cent over the preceding fiscal period.

That the German public is favoring cheaper grades of cigarettes is indicated by figures showing a decline in the average retail price of nearly 30 per cent since 1930-31.

Per capita consumption of cigarettes in Germany in 1932-33 amounted to 488. Of the total expenditures for tobacco products in that fiscal year, cigarettes accounted for 56.4 per cent.

$1,500,000 PWA Loan For B. & O. Is Approved

(Associated Press.)

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. received Interstate Commerce Commission approval Saturday of a loan of $1,500,000 from the Public Works Administration to buy 35,000 tons of new steel rails and necessary fastenings and fixtures.

The total expenditure will consist of $2,175,400 for material and $175,000 for labor.

The company, however, asked only to borrow $1,500,000 and to issue 10-year 4 per cent registered serial notes which will be sold to the Government.

Economists Differ on Yield From Bonds

J. M. Keynes Sees Lower Trend in Future; Others Oppose View.

By Claude A. Jagger.

New York, March 14 (AP).—When so prominent an economist as John Maynard Keynes expresses the opinion that the course of yields on long-term bonds is downward, investment analysts sit up and take notice.

If this prognostication is correct, it means that gilt-edged bonds are still cheap, despite current high levels, and that the United States Treasury will undoubtedly be able to refund its large floating debt on decidedly satisfactory terms.

Mr. Keynes recently expressed this opinion at the meeting of the National Mutual Life Insurance Co., of which he is chairman, in London. He felt that yields on long-term bonds, both in the United States and England, were definitely declining.

Other Experts Differ.

Wall street experts, however, are by no means unanimously accepting Mr. Keynes' analysis, particularly as regards the United States. With gold reserves vastly expanded, and a huge credit base set up for future use, it is acknowledged that credit may well be cheap for some time to come.

On the other hand, continued cheap credit, it is pointed out, implies a balanced budget.

Mr. Keynes' conclusion as regards the United States is evidently based on the belief that it will be possible over the next fiscal year to curtail Governmental expenditures in this country, according to the schedule outlined in the President's budget message.

Views of Skeptics.

Even if this is done, the skeptics point out, it is not impossible that inflationary efforts to raise commodity prices may bring such a credit expansion as will tend to deplete excess bank reserves, and make money tight.

Nevertheless, Mr. Keynes' theories have a considerable following, and there it a notable tendency to expect that within the course of the next year the Treasury may be able to put a large part of its debt on a satisfactory long-term basis.

It is pointed out that with the security markets and the banks under more rigid control, any runaway credit inflation which would tend to boost money rates can probably be prevented.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker
(Trade-Mark Applied For)

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

DEEP disappointment is expressed by Federal employe leaders in the House Democratic caucus vote, who point our the possibility of preventing an immediate House vote on the merits of the pay cut legislation.

BAKER.

Administration chiefs realize a clear majority is in favor of restoration, and their desire is to prevent such a vote, employe spokesmen said yesterday.

"Another gag rule to prevent a straight pay cut vote is the next step," E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, declared. "Congressmen who really favor pay restoration can not vote for this second gag, unless they admit total abdication of their powers as legislators.

"This action proves beyond question that our case has been won in reason, although not yet in fact. If the gag rule is passed, it will be an outstanding example of high pressure minority rule. How ironical that this caucus vote and the bonus vote happened on the same day!"

Erroneous citing of figures is charged to opponents of pay restoration, the labor leader charges.

"The difference," Mr. Babcock said, "between the Administration compromise and complete restoration on July 1 is $63,000,000, not the $216,000,000 which has been thrown around. Apparently 165 members think equitable payment involving $63,000,000 will wreck the country, but a bonus gesture will not cost anything, even though billions are involved. Apparently, a lot of voters are more important than disabled soldiers and meritorious employes.

"The A. F. G. E." Mr. Babcock adds, "asks every Congressman to stand on his feet and vote as he thinks, and permit others to do so. Even if the House folds up completely, luckily the Senate is still there. The pay cut fight will only be over when it is settled right by restoration."

A plotting device for determining flying data for artillery has been patented by James C. Karnes, (*), Navy. This ingenious mechanism is adapted for use at an observation station for determining the angle of the sight from gun to target.

GEORGE W. BAUMANN.

ONE of the most popular and efficient employes at Bureau of Animal Industry, Agriculture, Damon A. Spencer, will be 47 years old tomorrow. He is senior animal husbandman in charge of sheep, goat and animal fiber investigations. Mr. Spencer was born in Maple Grove, Mich., and is a graduate of Michigan State College. After teaching several years in Michigan and Oklahoma, he entered Government service in 1918.

SPENCER.

Mr. Spencer is an active member of the American Society of Animal Production, American Genetics Association, American Association for Advancement of Science, Cosmos Club and Petworth Methodist Church. He is president of the Michigan State College Alumni Association of Washington. He is also a member of the Petworth Citizens Association.

In 1913, Mr. Spencer married Miss Iva Coe. They have two daughters, Virginia, 13, and Mildred, 10.

You will receive tickets to Loew's Columbia (Greta Garbo and John Gilbert, in "Queen Christina") or to Loew's Palace (Frederic March, Miriam Hopkins and George Raft in "All of Me") or to Loew's Fox (stage, Benny Meroff's Orchestra; Kitchen Pirates and other acts; screen, Ann Harding in "Gallant Lady"). Persons whose names appear on holidays, call for tickets the next day.

John J. Orlosky, Insurance Claims Council, Veterans' Administration, is planning to build a swimming pool and tennis court on his newly acquired estate in nearby Maryland, reports from Arlington Building say.

Federal employes are invited to hear John Haynes Holmes speak on "World Chaos and the Way Out" at the Jewish Community Center tonight at 8:15 o'clock.

All Alabamans in Government service are urged to attend an entertainment and dance Friday night at the Raleigh Hotel. The affair will begin at 9 o'clock, Allen M. Laster, secretary of the Alabama Society, announces. Ira Y. Bain, chief of appointments, Internal Revenue, is president of the society. Reservations can be made through Mr. Bain or Mr. Laster or any officer of the group.

Ladies Night will be celebrated by the Massachusetts Society tomorrow night at the Shoreham Hotel, Robert H. Kempton, secretary, office of Representative Luce, announces. There will be dancing as usual from 9 to 1 o'clock.

Georgians Announce Dance.

The Georgia State Society will hold its third dance of the season Friday night in observance of St. Patrick's Day at the Shoreham Hotel. Miss Leone Barber (*), in charge of entertainment, has arranged for appearance of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. Glee Club. The floor committee consists of Commander and Mrs. Lewis P. Clephane, Maj. and Mrs. R. C. Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Camp, Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone Williams, Mrs. Alberta Odum and Miss Julia Reynolds.

GENIAL George Washington Baumann has just been retired from the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, Agriculture, after more than 43 years of Government service. Mr. Baumann, affectionately known throughout the bureau as "Pops," was administrative assistant to the chief of Soil Survey Division. He was born in Frederick, Md., February 22, 1864, and came to the National Capital as a youth to enter the Department of Agriculture.

In the presence of several friends who met in his office when he retired, Dr. C. F. Marbut, chief of the Soil Survey, paid tribute to Mr. Baumann's work. Dr. A. G. McCall, chief of the Soil Investigations Unit, also commended his ability.

Mr. Baumann's office associates sent to his home a sofa and chair among other farewell gifts.

Today's Epitaph.

Radio Waves and Ripples

JUST when it began to look as though we were to be drenched, if not drowned, in a classical flood of symphonies, concerts and operas, along came one of radio's chief show sponsors yesterday to save us.

The Philadelphia Orchestra comes off the air as a nightly broadcaster. In its place its sponsors are spotting Rosa Ponselle, Nino Martini and Gerte Stueckold, all of the Metropolitan, no less.

Before we are accused of making a deliberate misstatement of facts, permit us to say that the Misses Ponselle and Stueckold and Mr. Martini positively will not sing operatic arias and Andre Kostalanetz, who will assist them with an orchestra, absolutely will not direct the playing of symphonies. Not many, at least, for we have definite assurances that these talents will be utilized solely in the rendition of strictly 100 per cent American songs.

With a half-hour to fill three times a week, beginning April 2, the program makers apparently have taken a cue from the designers of Seven-Star Revue, C. B. S. Sunday show. Miss Ponselle has been assigned to do the solo work Monday nights, Mr. Martini, Wednesdays and Miss Stueckold, Saturdays. A 16-voice chorus and 40 of Mr. Kostalanetz's musicians will support them.

Nick Lucas is the name. Nick Lucas, the guitar and song man who hit his peak when the first wave of musical shows was coming out of Hollywood—"Gold Diggers of Broadway," "Show of Shows." Remember? You probably have a record or two of his about the place, bought in the days when the phonograph still held a high place among our instruments for breaking the peace.

Columbia is bringing him back in a two-shows-a-week series starting Wednesday at 11 p. m. Lucas first faced the microphone in 1921 when Downey and Crosby, in all probability, were planning to be firemen. His first program will include some of the songs he has introduced —"Tip-Top Through the Tulips," "Dreamer of Dreams," "You're Driving Me Crazy," &c.

ELAINE MELCHOIR
continues as one of Columbia's leading decorations and most frequently used actresses. Currently she's Ardala in Buck Rogers when not working in Hysterical History, Marvelous Melodies and Forty-five Minutes in Hollywood.

PHIL BAKER,

At another end of radio row—in the studios of NBC to be exact—they're beating drums for another Old Troubadour. Ray Heatherton is this name—age, 24; experience, seven years.

Such is the youth of radio that a mere boy can bear the title of Old Troubadour without the semblance of an anachromatic blush and a performer whose start was made slightly more than a decade ago can rightfully carry the label of old-timer.

Boy, oh boy!

Buck Rogers is gonna enter his rocket ship in a race from Niagara to the Golden City airport on Mars and back. Buck and Wilma will fly the earth plane. Bobar and Bundi will race for Saturn and Black Barney and Willie for Mars. Dr. Huer is working on his super-rocket motor that'll make 'em go even faster than Buck and Wilma did when they went to Pluto. He's making Bobar and Bundi a mystery ship with a gyro cosmic relativator, but I bet Buck and Wilma'll win anyway.

Haven't cha ever heard the Buck Rogers programs on the radio? Gosh!

N. B. C. has set aside a half-hour each week to give untried talents a chance to crash radio's high places.

The show has been called appropriately, "Airbreaks," and has been scheduled for Friday, March 23, under direction of Ernest J. Cutting, chief of the chain's audition department.

From the catalogues of promising talent have been drawn the names of Gregory Matusewitch, novelty instrumentalist; Peggy Jo Lobb, North Carolina Atwater Kent audition winner; Nancy Noland, "personality girl," and the Ritz Male Quartet.

The Most Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang, ninety-seventh Archbishop of Canterbury, broadcasting a Good Friday message from the Canterbury Cathedral, is Columbia's surprise for Holy Week. The Right Rev. William T. Manning, Episcopal Bishop of New York, will introduce him from Columbia's WABC at 4:45 p. m., March 30.
